INTRODUCTION.

ALTHOUGH the Typification of Moral truths and Doctrines by Symbolical Images and Devices had its origin in remote antiquity, and subsequently became a favourite method of imparting counsel and instruction with the Greeks and Romans, it was not until the middle of the sixteenth century that it began to assume (first in Italy) the character of a distinct kind of literature.

Towards the end of that century, the poetic genius of the erudite Andrea Alciati, of Milan, imparted so pleasing an impress to this new style of literature, as to direct thereto the attention of men of letters, with whom it soon became a favourite medium for the diffusion and popularization of moral maxims applicable to all the phases and circumstances of human life.

The Emblems of Alciati, written in Latin verse, and eulogized by such men as Erasmus, Julius Scaliger, Toscan, Neander, and Borrichius, were soon translated into the Italian, French, and German languages, and became so highly esteemed, that they were publicly read in the Schools, to teach youth the Art of Emblematic writing.

Thus established, as an elegant and useful method of inculcating, both by Word and Eye-pictures, the virtues of civil life; men of learning, poets, and statesmen, in France, Holland, Germany, Spain, and England, vied with each other, as it were, throughout the seventeenth century, in the cultivation of this branch of Composition, insomuch that it had become a favourite and admired medium for the diffusion of Religious, Social, and Political maxims, and maintained that position in public favour up to the end of the eighteenth century.

In the seventeenth century, Printing, and its sister art Engraving, had attained in Holland to a higher grade of perfection than in any other country of Europe, and, favoured by circumstances so auxiliary to the artistic illustration of works in the then not inaptly-termed "Picture Language," the poetic genius of a Jacob Cats found, in the pencils of Jan and Adrian Van De Venne, and the burins of Matham, Pet de Jode, Verstralen, Van Brouden, and others, artistic exponents worthy of his muse, and equal to his most ardent desires.

Introduction.

D. JACOB CATS, the eminent Dutch Jurisconsult, Statesman, and Poet, was born at Brouwershaven in the Isle of Schouwen, province of Zeeland, on the 10th November, 1577. His father was a counsellor of some standing; and his son Jacob was first destined to the profession of the law. Having completed his course of philosophy, he proceeded to the University of Leyden, to study jurisprudence. From thence he went to France, and was some time at the University of Orleans, where he took the degree of Doctor of Laws. He subsequently went to Paris, and was very desirous to visit Italy; but his family opposed his going thither, and he was obliged to return to Holland. Arrived at the Hague, he applied himself wholly to jurisprudence, and was assiduous in his attendance at the Public Pleadings of the most distinguished lawyers. To perfect himself still more in his profession, he put himself under the direction of the jurisconsult, Cornelius Van der Pol, one of the most eminent pleaders of the Dutch Bar. Some time afterwards, Cats practised with distinction at Zieuwreckzee, and at Brouwershaven. At this period it would seem he applied himself no less assiduously to Poetry, and not only became distinguished among the literati of Holland for the purity and elegance of his Latin verses, but soon took rank as one of her first lyrists in his native tongue. Falling seriously ill of an hectic fever, induced by over-application to study, he was advised by his physicians to seek a change of air.

Hereupon he repaired to England, and visited the Universities of Cambridge and Oxford. When in London he consulted the then celebrated physician, Dr. Butter, on the subject of the obstinate fever which still afflicted him; but that physician was not more fortunate in his prescriptions than those of Holland. Upon his return to his native country, he was eventually cured, says his biographer, Moreri, by an old alchemist.

Distinguishing himself by his legislative and statesmanlike qualifications, no less than he had done by his poetic genius, Jacob Cats rose subsequently to high Official rank, and for several years filled the post of State Pensionary and Chief Magistrate of Middleburgh and Dordrecht. He was eventually promoted to the rank of State Counsellor and Grand Pensionary of the province of West Friesland, and made Keeper of the Great Seal of Holland. After filling these important Offices for eighteen years, having now attained the age of seventy-two, he requested permission to retire into private life; which was at length granted by the States. His valuable services were, nevertheless, once more required, and he was solicited to form a member of the Embassy sent at that time to England, to arrange a treaty of commerce between the two countries. After discharging the important duties therein delegated to him, he retired wholly into private life, and devoted himself with faculties still unimpaired to the Muses, up to the advanced age of eighty-three years, when he may be said to have expired with the pen in his hand. Few men have left behind them greater proofs of indefatigable industry than Jacob Cats; and his numerous lyrical works are as rich in poetic genius as they are replete with evidence of world-knowledge and genial with the love of mankind.

Introduction.

Would the limits allotted to this Introduction permit of a more detailed account of the life and works of this highly gifted, good man, numerous incidents and passages in both might be adduced, which would awaken in the breasts of Englishmen and women (for he was especially the poetic champion of the worth and virtues of the fair sex) an appreciation and esteem of his genius and character, as great almost as that felt for him by his own countrymen and women : among whom Father Cats, as he is affectionately called, is honoured as the bard of Home and of the Domestic hearth, the still popular and revered instructor of his countrymen in the Virtues of Social life, and in the Maxims of purest world-wisdom.

The "Moral Emblems" of Jacob Cats, to which Daniel Heinsius rendered his tribute of eulogy, as also two of Holland's greatest lyrists, Hoogstraaten and Zeeuwes, are almost unknown, even by name, in England, from being chiefly written in the Dutch language, of which it has been truly said, that "it has been a language too hastily neglected and despised by Englishmen."

They form, nevertheless, in the collect, a series of the most admirable compositions in Emblematic Literature which any language can boast, though written at a period when the Dutch tongue, like the rest of the northern European languages, was yet rigid and quaint in its structure, and so different in its orthographical style and idiom to the Dutch of the present day, that to most modern Dutch scholars his earlier works are almost a sealed book. Nevertheless, when Cats wrote in the vernacular of his day, the Dutch language, like that of his contemporary, Shakespeare, had been developing capabilities of harmony combined with vigour of expression, quite equal to our own, as an exponent of poetic thought and imagery, and was one in which no writer of his day knew better how to speak to the feelings of his countrymen, and win their hearts by the pleasantly conveyed wisdom of his "household words" than Jacob Cats.

By his "Sinne en Minne Beelden," and his "Emblemata Moralia et Economica," Jacob Cats first established his fame, both as a classical writer, an amiable moralist, and a popular poet. The former written in Dutch and Latin verse, each theme accompanied by a short distich in French verse, gave evidence both of the versatility of his poetic genius and of his linguistic talent. The success achieved by these compositions encouraged him to carry out his predilection for this style of writing in a yet more extended form ; and some time after he gave to the world his "Spiegel van den Voorleden en Tegenwoordigen Tyt," or "Mirrors of the Past and Present Time," in which he emblematised, in Dutch verse, the numerous proverbs and sayings of antiquity, together with the most popular and current adages of his day, in most of the European languages.

The above-named Emblematic works comprise many hundred subjects, in the treatment of which he evinced as much ingenuity as poetic grace, in working them out so as to render them a charming Code of Moral Instruction, addressed alike to the Youth of both sexes, and applicable to every phase of Civil and Political life.

Introduction.

To every subject of his Word-Pictures, he appends, in support of the moral he inculcates, the most pertinent quotations from the Ancient writers, and a most interesting collect of Popular adages, bearing upon the sense of each theme.

From so rich a mine of Emblematic lore, the present volume forms, of course, but a selection from each of the above-named series, the subjects of which could not therefore be placed in the same order as in the originals, without the appearance of meagreness; while the embodiment of the subjects selected in the present form will, it is hoped, be found more pleasing as a whole, and best calculated to give an idea of the diversity of subject treated by the Author.

Sir Joshua Reynolds, when a youth, was much influenced by the Artistic excellence of Adrian Van de Venne's Designs for the illustration of the Dutch Folio Edition of Cats' Works, of which he made careful copies; and Sir Wm. Beechy, in his Life of Reynolds, states that "Sir Joshua's richest store was Jacob Cats' Book of Emblems, which his grandmother, a native of Holland, had brought with her from that country."

Reproduced with the best appliances of Modern Art, in the Pictorial Illustration of the word-pictures of the Author, the original designs of Adrian Van de Venne, in a few instances only, have been deviated from, in so far as was deemed most consistent with the more elevated taste of the present day in pictorial embellishment.

The Proverbs of the different nations,—that wisdom which of all others sprang from the bosom of the Peoples in every land, and was handed down from generation to generation, rather orally than by books,—form so pleasing and instructive a feature in the Emblems of Cats, that they have been for the most part preserved in their literal garb of Cats' day, an adhesion to the original which it is believed will have a greater charm and interest for the student of Languages, curious to see the shape in which the traditionally acquired wisdom of long past days was expressed until it reached us in the more polished garb of modern times.

Wherever admissible, passages from English and other Authors, having an affinity in sense, and moral, to the Emblem or theme, have been introduced, by way of elaborating, or of giving more weight to the doctrine inculcated by the Author. The appendage to this selection from Cats' Moral Emblems of a reprint of the now exceedingly rare and curious Poems and Emblems of his contemporary Emblematist, the pious Scot, ROBERT FARLIE, published in London under the title of "Lychnocausia," in 1638, will, it is hoped, be considered a not unpleasing associate for the Dutch moralist, and their juxtaposition in the same volume give an additional interest to the whole.

LIST OF CONTENTS AND ILLUSTRATIONS.

PORTRAIT OF JACOB CAIS. Under allegorical figure of Universal Justice, supported on one side by Solomon, Confucius, and Jesus; upon the other by Age instructing Infancy and Adolescence, in the presence of Labour and Travel; whilst in the background Peace and Plenty are contrasted with the violent acts of man against the will of Supreme Power. In the centre foreground is a vase of flowers surrounded by choke-weeds—type of elevated nature a constant prey to the coarser elements. On the base are sculptured bas-reliefs, “Summ cuique”—Let each apply to himself that which him fits; “Bonus cum bonis”—The just with the true. Frontispiece, engraved by LEIGHTON.

MORAL EMBLEMS.

WITH HONOUR, FAITH, AND WITH THE EYE, TRIFLE NOT.

NONE CAN CLEAN THEIR DRESS FROM STAIN, BUT SOME BLEMISH WILL REMAIN.

HOW I've splash'd and foil'd my gown!
With this gadding through the town:
How bedraggled is my skirt,
Trapefing through the bye-streets dirt:
In what a state for me to be,
From this Town-life gaiety!

EHRE GLAUBE, UND AUGER KEIN SCHERTZ.

HE WHO HAS LOST HIS REPUTATION IS A DEAD MAN AMONG THE LIVING.

QUIEN LA FAMA HA PERDIDO, MUERTO ANDA EN LA VIDA.

Come girls here, come all I know,
 Playmates mine, advise me, shew
 In this plight that I'm come to,
 What is best for me to do?
 How shall I remove this stain,
 And restore my gown again?

It to wash it out I try—
 Washing shrinks the cloth when dry;
 Makes the colour often fade,
 Or else gives a darker shade:
 If I cut it out, there'll be
 Such a hole that all must see:
 If I rub it hard, 'twill take
 All the nap off then, and make
 Yet more plain, the stain that ne'er
 Honest maiden's drefs should bear.
 Pray then tell me some of you,
 What in this mishap to do?
 Thus so slut-like to be stain'd,
 Makes me of myself asham'd;
 For wherever I may go,
 People will look at me so,—
 And think perhaps,—such dirt to see,
 I'm not what I ought to be.

Say, can none of you suggest,
 What in such a case is best?—
 No?—then this I plainly see,
 You must warning take by me!
 If you would not soil your gown;
 Go not gadding through the town:
 In the streets who plays the flirt,
 Never yet escaped some dirt:—
 Run not therefore East and West,
 Home for girls is much the best.

Over hill or over moor,
In the house or out of door,
Over road or over street,
Girls, where'er you bend your feet,
Keep your Clothes and Kirtles neat.

MUCH Men do is Folly merely ;
And if asked the reason, why ?
Seldom, truthfully and clearly,
To the question they reply.
If reply they make, 't is ever,
With them all, the same excuse,
And some think the answer clever :
" 'Tis the Fashion " — " custom " — " use ! "

CE QUE ME LIE, C'EST MA FOLIE.

Thus it ever is with fools;
 Custom more than Reason rules:
 And where Reason should be law,
 Fashion—Customs, flight as straw,
 Stronger chains on them impose,
 Bonds more binding far than those,
 Tyrants since the world began,
 Laid upon their fellow man.
 He vainly boasts that he is free,
 Who fears t' infringe on Fashion's rule;
 For worse than slave, already, he
 Is both at once—a slave, and fool.

 Who sees not, when she most affects the Dove.
 She but derides the passion he reveals;
 And that most false when most she vows her love,
 'Tis but to seem what least she is—and feels.
 If true that, he who wills it may be free:
 Who hath no Will, must have a lack of brains:

The Fisher who these fish would get,
Needs neither baited hook nor net :
A blazing torch, his only lure,
Fix'd in his boat, is far more sure
Than bow-net, seine, or hook and bait,
His skiff in little time to freight.
For while his mates propel the boat,
As up and down the stream they float ;
The fish enchanted with the light
That makes a mimic day of night,
From far and near toward the blaze
Directing their enraptur'd gaze,
Swim up in shoals, and sport around,
Till giddy with delight they bound
Into the fisher's bark, and there
Forfeit their life for love of glare.
Those who on Love or Pleasure bent,

Disappointment in Marriage.

LISTEN, I pray you, to the stories of the disappointed in marriage:—collect all their complaints: hear their mutual reproaches; upon what fatal hinge do the greatest part of them turn?—"They were mistaken in the person."—Some disguise either of body or mind is seen through in the first domestic scuffle:—some fair ornament—perhaps the very one which won the heart, the ornament of a meek and quiet spirit—falls off: It is not the Rachael for whom I have served,—Why hast thou then beguiled me?

Be open—be honest: give yourself for what you are: conceal nothing, varnish nothing,—and if these fair weapons will not do,—better not conquer at all, than conquer for a day: when the night is passed, 'twill ever be the same story.—And it came to pass, behold it was Leah!

If the heart beguiles itself in its choice, and imagination will give excellencies which are not the portion of flesh and blood:—when the dream is over, and we awake in the morning, it matters little whether 'tis Rachael or Leah be the object what it will, as it must be on the earthly side, at least, of perfection, it will fall short of the work of fancy, whose existence is in the clouds.

In such cases of deception, let not man exclaim as Jacob does in his, What is it thou hast done unto me?—for 'tis his own doings, and he has nothing to lay his fault on, but the heat and poetic indiscretion of his own passions. —SHERN's Sermons, vol. IV. p. 11.

Or when some sound unusual strikes their ear,
 Fly, to meet ills far worse than those they fear!
 And yet how frequent, would they but refrain
 The sudden terror of their fever'd brain,
 And calmer wait t'examine and to see
 The how, or end of what the thing may be;
 Puerile as that which fill'd the child with dread,
 They'd find the fancied peril which they fled;
 And scan'd with coolness, learn more probably,
 That what in front is terrible to see,
 Seen from behind provokes hilarity!

Timiditas est corruptio judicii.

SENECA.

THE Imagination (says Seneca) appals us usually more than the thing itself; in like manner as the mere whizzing sound of a sling frightens birds, and makes them take wing, so are we alarmed more by the noise than by the act. As the forms of bodies appear increased in size in misty weather, so are all things magnified to us by Fear: in so much that many through fear of coming into danger, fall, daily, into the most extreme peril. Men have been known, in peril of shipwreck, to throw themselves overboard through fear of being drowned; drowning themselves, therefore, in order not to be drowned, and dying to avoid death. What folly so great (says Seneca) as to become troubled at approaching difficulties, to spare ourselves no anguish, but rather call an increase of sufferings to those that threaten!

PERIL, interii, occidi—quo curram? quo non curram?

Death, where is thy Sting?

E'EN as the mask, in front seen, only, fills
The mind of children with a panic fear,
So Death by men is feared: yet least of ills,
Alike of both the terrors disappear
When seen by Reason's light on every side.
And why fear Death, ere we its nature know?
'Tis but a livid mask, which, seen behind,
Hath terrors none, but balm for every woe,
Hope, peace, and comfort to the righteous mind:
Opening to realms more bright, the portals wide.

Avoid too much Familiarity.

IT is unwise both to use and to permit too great Familiarity. Who is too familiar, soon lose the superiority which their previous reserve gave to them—consequently, their credit. We should be familiar with none—never with our inferiors, because it is dangerous; nor with our inferiors, because it is derogatory, and still less with the vulgar, whose ignorance renders them insolent, and unable to appreciate the honour that is done them, they presume that it is their due. Familiarity is one of the tendencies of a weak mind.—GRAYSON.

Love and Legislation.

STRANGE, and passing strange, that the relation between the two Sexes, the Passion of Love, in short, should not be taken into deeper consideration by our Teachers and our Legislators.

People educate and legislate as if there was no such thing in the World : but ask the Priest, ask the Physician—let them reveal the amount of Moral and Physical results from this one cause.

Must Love be always discussed in blank verse, as if it were a thing to be played in Tragedies or sung in Songs—a subject for pretty Poems and wicked Novels, and had nothing to do with the prosaic current of our every day existence, our Moral Welfare and Eternal Salvation ? Must Love be ever treated with profaneness, as a mere illusion ? or with coarseness, as a mere impulse ? or with fear, as a mere dread ? or with shame, as a mere weakness ? or with levity, as a mere accident ? Whereas it is a great Mystery, and a great Necessity, lying at the foundation of Human Existence, Morality, and Happiness—mysterious, universal, inevitable as Death. Why, then, should Love be treated less seriously than Death ? It is as serious a thing, —MR. JAMESON.

WHO fearst outrageous Vulcans damned ire,
 And wouldst be safe from night-surprising fire;
 Put out the flame, the smoaking snuffe suppress,
 Least from the smoake the fire it selfe redresse;
 For fire is next to smoake, and oft its seene,
 That reaking snuffe a blazing fire hath beene.

Who feares the damned fire of inward lust,
 And Cupids flames, observe this rule he must.
 Hearts concupiscence, 'fore it's vehement,
 Looke that in words he suffer't not to vent;
 For words are smoake of burning hearts desire;
 Smother his words, he needs not feare the fire:
 But otherwayes a wanton complement,
 Doth blow his fire, and makes him give consent.

NEVER YET RUN SMOOTH.

CONTENT IS HAPPINESS.

Sae quemque Fortuna parit.

EACH DEPLORES HIS OWN LOT.

THE Fish that in the Weel are taken,
When they find no issue more,
Feel the stronger with awaken
To be where they were before:
But the Fish that see them in it,
Think it far more pleasant there;
And they strive their best to win it,
Swimming round it ev'rywhere.

THOU SHALT NOT COVET.

CONTENTMENT IS TO THE MIND WHAT LIGHT IS TO THE BODY.

CONTENTMENT IS THE SUNSHINE OF THE MIND.

Thus it is that men, like Fishes,
 Ne'er contented with their lot,
 Ever restless in their wifhes,
 Craving more than what they've got;—
 In their greed of wealth and station,
 Coveting yet more and more,
 Oft in change of situation,
 Find it worse than t'was before.

ALL men have their trials and afflictions, but a contented mind accommodates itself to every vicissitude of life; neither poverty nor distress, neither losses nor disappointments, neither sickness nor sorrow, can affect its equanimity.—DR. BROWNE.

A CONTENTED mind is free from the distressing passions of ambition, covetousness, jealousy, envy and the like, which prey like Vultures upon the peace of the discontented.—Ibid.

I AM richer than you, if I do not want things, which you cannot do without.
SOCRATES.

THERE is a jewel which no Indian mine can buy.
No chemic art can counterfeit ;
It makes men rich in greatest poverty,
Makes water wine, turns wooden cups to gold.
The homely whistle to sweet music's strain ;
Seldom it comes, to few from heaven sent.
That much in little—all in nought—Content.

WILBYE'S Madrigals.

If there be any happiness to be found upon earth, it is in that which we call contentation : this is a flower that grows not in every garden : the great Doctor of the Gentiles tells us that he had it ; I have learned (saith he) in what estate soever I am, therewith to be content.—BR. HALL. Of Contentation.

If solid happiness we prize,
Within our breast the jewel lies ;
And they are fools who roam ;
The world has nothing to bestow ;
From our own selves our joys must flow,
And that dear place our home.

COTTON.

Vain is alike the joy we seek.
And vain what we possess,
Unless harmonious reason tunes

CARLE.

HE THAT IS WARM THINKS ALL ARE SO.

ALL living things with others losse maintaine
 Their life, not so my harmelesse light I gaine.
 The plant doth feede upon the fertile soile;
 And brutish beafts the pleafant plants doe spoile;
 So harmelesse beast, and bird, and fish must dy,
 To pamper mans too licorish gluttony.
 But of condition though I mortall be;
 Yet this my Light is onely nurft by me.

The most of men doe live by others losse,
 Whilst others goods they to themselves engrosse:
 So man proves wolfe to man, and robbery gives
 Most gaine to him, who most unjustly lives.
 Thrice happy's he, who's of his state content,
 As if it were Crassus or Cræsus rent.

FARLIE'S Emblems.

SUCH THINGS AS YE HAVE.

BEAUTY IS NO INHERITANCE.

Ogni Fiore al fin perde l'odore.

BEAUTY WITHOUT VIRTUE IS LIKE A ROSE WITHOUT SCENT

ROSES AND MAIDENS SOON LOSE THEIR BLOOM.

EVERY FLOWER LOSES ITS PERFUME AT LAST.

MAIDEN! will you never learn
All the lessons Flowers teach,
And that each of them in turn
Hath its potent power of speech?
In the early violet's bloom,
Modest mien, and sweet perfume,

BEAUTY IS THE SUBJECT OF A BLEMISH.

In the daisy of the mead,
If you have the mind to read,
Simple though to you they seem,
Each affords its moral theme!

Ev'ry Rose that here you see,
Ev'ry Flower that blooms a-field,
Whatsoever their Beauty be,
Must alike that Beauty yield!
Aye! believe me, maiden fair,
Whatsoever the Gard'ner's care,
Whatsoever his skill may be,
It but little needs, to see
That which is so fair to day
Vanish like a dream away!

Let there come a chilling rain,
Nipping wind or flightest frost,
Few would lift their heads again—
All their Beauty would be lost!
Or, e'en let the Sun, whose light
Calls to life their colours bright,
But too fiercely on them shine,
Straight you'll see their bloom decline,
Wither'd by too great excess
Of that very Sun's caress!

Maidens! and Young Women all!
Learn then as you should from this,
All the ills that youth befall,
And how fleeting Beauty is! —
Lips that with the coral vie,
Witching Beauty of the eye,
Ev'ry charm of form and face,
Whatsoever their winning grace,
Have their Emblem of decay
In the Rose of yesterday!

Maiden, there is something too,
Woman's Beauty ne'er defied,
 Though as rich in charms as you,
 And as full of youthful pride.
 You have but to look at me,
 And you may that something see,
 That can steal away each grace,
 And in little time deface,—
 Whatsoever be your care,—
 All that makes you now so fair.

Time! it is, whose stealthy wing
 Throws on all alike its shade,—
 Fades the bloom of ev'ry thing,
 Howsoever fair 'twas made!
 Time! though it so softly treads,
 Silent ruin round us spreads;
 And as Age has done by me,
 If you live, you'll surely see—
 Beauty's but an idle boast,
 Your's to-day; to-morrow lost!

But, there is a Beauty yet,
 Far more lasting in the wear;
 That which Virtue doth beget,
 Fadeless—bright—beyond compare:
 Make that Beauty your's, fair maid;
 Time o'er that can cast no shade;
 And when wrinkled that fair brow,
 'Twill be fairer far than now,—
 With a Beauty that shall gain
 Lasting Love in God's domain.

As for Man, his days are as grass—as a flower of the field, so he flourisheth;
 For the wind passeth over it, and it is gone: and the place thereof shall know it no more.—Psalms ciii. 15, 16.

SUCH is lights love to Heaven, that still above
 It mounts, and cannot to the center move;
 Hold you it under, it will upward reach,
 And through its ruinous body make a breach.

Our foule doth bend our bodies straight and even,
 As with it felfe, it would them raife to Heaven;
 But all in vaine it undergoes fuch toyle,
 The body will not leave its native foyle:
 Age puls it downe, and makes it ftoope full low,
 Till death doth give his fatall overthrow
 Then through the bodies breach the Soule doth rife,
 And like a conquerour, mount to the fkyes.

Near and more near upon the bird he gains,
 And as the space that parts them smaller grows,
 With speed increased, he plies the foot and strains
 Towards the game, now close before his nose.
 Then bounding high at once from out the wave
 With sudden rush to seize the certain prize:
 That which he thought no means of flight could save,
 Dives 'neath the flood, before his wond'ring eyes.

In Love affairs, as in intrigues at court,
 It oft occurs as in the field of sport;
 Almost before the chase we have begun
 We deem the Fair, the place, and game are won;
 And when most sure we've grasp'd the prize aright,
 We see it quickly vanish from our sight.
 'Tis not alone in sleep that dreams arise;
 Our hopes are oft but dreams with waking eyes;—
 As visionless and vain by day as night,
 We think them real, and they fade from sight,
 Leaving the heart to grieve and to complain,
 To find itself so cheated by the brain.

FORTUNE is fond of change ; she allows herself to be possessed, and she escapes from us. Dost thou suffer from her fickleness ? Learn to bear it with patience.—PYTHAGORAS.

God's Providence, alike in the Smiles and Frowns of Fortune.

Ferendum et Sperandum.

THAT Fortune is so changeful in her moods,
Is scarcely to be blam'd in such degree
As we are wont to hear.
Did we but put the question to ourselves ;
We, who do change each moment of our lives !—
In her so fickle nature we should see
That which our changeful nature best befits.
The only difference lies therein ; that we Find Fortune's changes more abrupt and loud
Than those which daily in ourselves take place :
Which like the Shadow of the Dial, mark
Their silent progress—but a progress still,
Not the less certain that it seem to us
Less evident, because insensible !
Yet, mutative in body as in mind,
With faculties that change with ev'ry day
Their pow'r t' enjoy, or estimate aright
The lights and shades which fall across our path
We still repine ungrateful for the Light,
And deem the Shadows more than we can bear
And this withal, forgetful of that Power
Who in His Wisdom, wiser far than we,
Knew best what our frail nature would befit,
To make us that He will'd that we should be

With humble joy bear Fortune's transient smile,
Nor let her frown to discontent beguile
With steadfast Hope, Columbus like, at last
Thou'lt find the New World when the storm is past

WHEN as my Light with beames did brightly shine,
 And starre-light was but equall unto mine ;
 I was in great request and fet above,
 Was deare to all, who saw me, did me love :
 Now breathing fighes, and languishing I grone :
 I'm hatefull to my selfe, belov'd of none.
 If once againe my light beginne to burne,
 With it my light and honour shall returne.

When Fortune standing on her slippery ball,
 Doth favour, then are we admir'd of all ;
 But if she frowne, then flatterers flye away,
 No friends abide, if once your meanes decay :
 O but if Fortune change, and smile againe,
 Then fawne these flatterers, and beare up your traine.
 Much like the Sea these Clients flote and flow ;

FARLIE'S Emblems.

LOVE IS THE LOADSTONE OF LOVE.

Amor, ut Pila, vices exigit.

LOVE CAN NEITHER BE BOUGHT NOR SOLD;

ITS ONLY PRICE IS LOVE.

LOVE, LIKE A BALL, REQUIRES TO BE THROWN BACK.

MAIDEN fair! if you would learn
Well to play this pleasant game;
You must strike in quick return,
So that I may do the same.
Should you fail to strike at all,
And that I make play alone,

SWEET IS THE LOVE THAT MEETS RETURN

Then the shuttle's fure to fall,
 And the game at once is done.
 Mark, sweet maiden, when I strike,
 And attend to what I say:
 Tennis and Love's game alike
 Need a quick return of play:
 Who their pleasure most would know,
 And in equal share partake,
 In both games alike must shew
 Equal zest to give and take.
 Love and Tennis both, play'd ill,
 Soon upon the players pall,
 When one shews a want of will
 To hit back the flying ball.
 Love, to Love is demonstrative;
 Love, gives life and strength to Love,
 And in being thus creative,
 Love doth most its power prove.
 Love, of Love's at once the Price,
 And Reward that Love loves best;
 Nothing can to Love suffice,
 But the Love that gives it rest.
 If from me to Love you'd learn,
 Love; and be my Sweetheart true;
 But if you give no return,
 Then I'll say — good-bye to you.

HIGH up in air, the sea-mew spies
An oyster lying on the strand,
Gaping with open shell t' inhale
The summer breeze from off the land.
To seize the luscious morsel quick -
With sudden swoop and deadly pick,
The sea-bird darts his horny beak
Between the oyster's shell:

HOLD-FAST IS A GOOD DOG

But clofing on it quick as thought,
The bird is by the oyfter caught!
And nipped fo tight and well;
That ftrive and ftruggle as he may,
To free his beak, and get away;
He keeps him captive, firmly bound,
Till with return of tide he's drowned.

Strange cafe it is—yet nothing lefs than true,
His very fortune caufes him diftrefs,
Nor knows he with his capture what to do!
A very load to him, a trouble quite,

THE Power and the Riches acquired by a life of anxious toil, slip not unfrequently from their possessor's hands, from defective government, or mismanagement : because it is easier to acquire power and to gain wealth than to keep and use them prudently when gotten. An especial virtue is needful to this, more than is required for the gradual heaping up of riches.

Non labore, sed munificentia Domini.

Not by labour, but by the blessing of the Lord.

THE oyster without change of place, or toil,

Prosper in peace, and easy takes his spoil :

The sea-mew, restless, sweeps the shore and main

In quest of food, and, little oft to gain :

The oyster toils but little, yet he thrives :

The sea-mew, less from his great toil derives :

And so all labour is in vain, unless

Ecclesiastes IX. 11.

I SAW under the sun, that the race is not to the swift, nor the battle to the strong, neither yet bread to the wise, nor yet riches to men of understanding, nor yet favour to men of skill : but time and chance happeneth to them all.

THE Righteousness of the upright shall deliver them : but transgressors shall be taken in their own naughtiness.—Proverbs xi. 6.

Go not forth hastily to strive, lest thou know not what to do in the end thereof, when thy neighbour hath put thee to shame.—Proverbs xxv. 8.

 The Loadstone to the iron gives vertue rare,
 And yet no wayes his owne he doth impaire;
 So this my torch can give to others light,

THE BRANCHES MAY BE TRAINED, BUT NOT

IF I want wood to build a house,
I would cut down this tree:
'Tis a fine stem, although in truth
It somewhat crooked be.
I've sunk this pole, in hopes to bend
It somewhat straighter by;

YOUTH AND WHITE PAPER TAKE ANY IMPRESSION

Yet fear, though I the trunk e'en with
 A hundred withies tie—
 (It is so stiff in heart and growth,)
 That it will never take
 A better shape, whatever be
 The efforts I may make.
 But while here on the ladder, I
 Some person hear below!—
 Some voice unknown that calls to me,
 Holloa! up there! holloa!
 And somehow (why I know not) I
 Leave off to hear what he
 Has got to say, and this is the Discourse he holds to me:
 Eh! man, what art about? wouldst bend
 A full grown tree like this!
 Dost take it for a sapling, eh?—
 Why what's with thee amiss!
 There is no sense in what thou dost,
 So spare thy labour, friend;
 'Tis only when the tree is young
 That thou the stem canst bend'
 Go, get thee home, and rather let
 Thy children have thy care:
 The labour that thou here bestow'st,
 Were better given there.
 Those are the trees whose growth once set
 Will give thee most concern:
 And from th' experience of my years,
 This lesson thou may'st learn:
 In tender youth alone, the mind
 To Virtue can be train'd;
 But that once pass'd, its growth and bend
 Are not to be reclaim'd.

THE above adage is taken from the collection of Arabic sayings collected and translated by the learned Polygot D. Erpenium, who was Professor in the high school of Leyden. This saying admonishes all parents and guardians that the years of childhood only are fitted for instruction, and that therefore a special regard should be had to them for that purpose. "Bend the neck of thy child whilst he is yet young, so that he become not stiff-necked," saith the Lord. Many sayings of our time, either in word or spirit, and frequently in both, correspond with that divine admonition. In allusion hereto, Scaliger in his day, cited in his Collection of Proverbs as coincident in meaning the French adage :

VIEIL arbre mal aisé à redresser.
Alte Bäume sind böse zu biegen.
Alte Hunden böss bändig zu machen.
Old dogs are hard to train.

ETH moet vroeg krommen dat een goede reep worden sal.

LOOK at these Girls!—When they first came to me,
They were so fluttish and untidy both,
I never had a saucepan fit to see,
And scarcely ever a clean kitchen cloth.
But now it is a pleasure to behold;
They are become so wondrous clean and neat;

NEITHER A LOG, NOR A STORK, GOOD JUPITER.

I never have to rate them, nor to scold,
 Nor ever now an order to repeat.
 They're scouring, scrubbing things continually,
 'Tis rare indeed such girls as them to meet;
 Their kitchen's quite a palace, as you see,
 And look, their dresser! isn't it a treat?
 They never now require to be told
 A single thing: and, what is even more,
 I'm often now almost obliged to scold,
 They've got so over nice, 'tis quite a bore!
 They're now what I call cleanly to excess,
 And make themselves more work than need be made.
 So much, that oft I'd rather see a mess,
 That I might have some reason to upbraid.
 There, look! 'tis quite ridiculous to see!
 Those pans and kettles which they're scrubbing so;
 Although I've said it don't require to be,
 They clean the very bottoms of them too!
 'Tis just the way with foolish people all,
 When once their old bad habits they forsake,
 In th' opposite extreme too oft they fall,
 And of a virtue then a folly make.

Exaggeration is a species of lying; he who exaggerates shews himself to be a man of bad taste, and, what is worse, a man of much trouble. —GAYLARD

MY Light into a snuffe is almost turn'd,
 And now the candle to smoaking ashes burn'd,
 Behold another Light stands ready by,
 Which to enjoy my place will make me dye.
 Yet not unpunish'd it puts out my breath,
 My very ashes doe revenge my death.

So doth the sonne his Father make away,
 If not with sword, with grieve, before his day,
 That he his Fathers goods and meanes may joy,
 Which Nemesis revenging doth convoy.
 For oft the spendthrifts goods so evill gotten
 Are spent before his Fathers bones are rotten.

FARLIE'S Emblems.

TOO MUCH OF ONE THING

IS GOOD FOR NOTHING.

PROSPERITY GAINS FRIENDS,

When the Wind serves, all aid.

GREASE THE FAT SOW!

“WHO claimeth kindred with the Poor?”
So few! that 'twas the reason why
The question was first put, no doubt,
And truly! it doth much imply.
Replete with meaning are those words,
Though few to picture and express
In time of yore, as even now,
Man's all-absorbing selfishness.

ADVERSITY TRIES THEM.

IN TIMES OF PROSPERITY FRIENDS WILL BE PLENTY,

IN TIMES OF ADVERSITY NOT ONE IN TWENTY.

The sage* who said in antient days :

“When the strong-box contains no more,
And that the kitchen fire is out,

Both friends and flatt'ers shun the door,”

Attested then, what even now

Is daily seen on every hand :

The prosperous in life, alone

Have proffer'd service at command.

Let Fortune with propitious winds

Waft but the laden bark to shore,

He finds a host of helping friends,

Who never had a friend before.

Beyond his need on ev'ry side,

He sees unask'd-for sympathy ;

Officious zeal to help and aid

The tide of his prosperity.

“Grease the fat fow ! all help ! all aid !”

On ev'ry hand the harpies cry ;

'Tis easy rowing in the wake

Of others' toil and industry !

Thus 'tis in life, we constant see

The Drones and Idlers of our kind,

Prey on the labours of the Bee,

And fatten on what others find.

The Foxes of the human race,

The Beavers of their own despoil ;

Craft, lord it in poor Merit's place,

And take the credit of his toil.

WHILST I did shine fierce Boreas put me out,
 Againe he kindles me at the second bout :
 As sometimes did the clowne, now Boreas doth,
 Both heat and cold he breatheth from his mouth,
 The billow whom it cast into the maine,
 Returning threw him in the Shippe againe ;
 Fortune throwes downe, then raifeth from the ground ;
 Achilles speare doth cure whom it did wound.
 Losses prove good to some ; whom Greece condemnd,
 The Persian for his valour could commend.
 Be not cast downe, dispaire not at mischance,
 God who hath crossed thee, will thee advance.

FARLIE'S Emblems.

TIME PAST NEVER RETURNS.

TOO MUCH FAMILIARITY BREEDS CONTEMPT.

Faites feste au chien, il te gastera ton habit.

PLAY WITH THE DOG, AND HE'LL SPOIL YOUR CLOTHES.

AS in the garden yesterday,
In full Court suit, I coax'd our Tray,
And with each friendly pat and stroke,
The usual words of kindness spoke;
He in return for my cares,
Sprang up, unmindful of my drefs,

LA FAMILIARITE ENGENDRE LE MEPRIS.

STREEKYE DEN HONDT, HY BEDERFT UW KLEEDT.

LA FAMILIARITA FA DISPREGIAMENTO.

And with his dirty feet and nose
 Besmear'd my handsome cloak and hose.
 In spite of all that I could say,
 To keep in bounds his ruthless play;—
 Grown bolder still, the vexing brute,
 As though intent to spoil my suit,
 Jump'd up again—my shoe-ties foil'd,
 My satin knee-bows fray'd and spoil'd;
 Till finding all my chiding vain,
 His wanton fondness to restrain;
 In wrath I kick'd th' unmanner'd hound,
 And laid him sprawling on the ground.
 As with the brute, with man no less,
 The friendship of th' uncultur'd mind
 Is irksome oft, from sheer excess
 Of zeal to do the thing that's kind.
 However friendly you may be
 Dispos'd your serving-man to treat,
 Let not your partiality
 Be shewn beyond the bound that's meet:
 With equal care your fondness shew,
 When you your child or dog caress;
 For both alike as little know,
 How far the friendship may transgress,
 That ruffles self-love through the Drefs.

IN reverse sense of what has been said above, the Hebrew proverb saith, "If your friend be sugar you must not eat him all up;" i. e. that we must not require too much of those who are willing to serve us ; that we should never misuse any one's courtesy ; nor over-ride a willing horse :

SHOULD any ask the reason why
I use nor whip nor spurs to ply
The mare I ride?—It is that she
Requires nor whip nor spur from me :
Because her mettle is so good,
And she's so willing in her mood,
That since I've her bestrode, I ne'er
Found her dispos'd her legs to spare.
For whip or spur no use I see
Whene'er a horse goes willingly :
And this I hold :—From horse nor man
That willing gives, take all you can :
Nor is he wise who tries his friend
Beyond his will to give or lend.
Who overloads his ass, no less
To obtain his wish the worst way chooses
His ass stands still from sheer distress,
And greed of gain the market loses :

NOW Boreas puffing in his boiftrous ire
 Blows as he were to kindle Vulcans fire:
 He doth undoe me by his churlifhneffe,
 I am confumed more, and shine the leffe:
 He fpendes his labour, fo I lofe mine oyle,
 As no wayes fit to undergoe fuch toyle.

You beat the Affe lingering under his load,
 The generous Horfe deferveth not a goad:
 The Mufes fonnes cannot away with lathes,
 Which are more fitting for Arcadian affes.

 Which who fo paffeth, Nature he confounds.

FARLIE'S Emblems.

DE ROSE FLETRIE NUL NE SOUCIE.

Turpe Senilis Amor.

UBI MEL, IBI APES.

WHERE BEES ARE, THERE IS HONEY.

BEES TOUCH NO FADING FLOWERS.

THE Rose round which of late in such disport,
So many came t' admire and to court;
With drooping head now mourns that she should be
By all forsaken she was wont to see.
No gentle Zephyr now as yester-noon,
Comes near to revel in her sweet perfume;

THE FADED ROSE NO SUITOR KNOWS.

No Butterfly with wings of varied hue,
 Now hovers near, and stays his flight to view
 Her full-blown beauties—nor as hitherto,
 To kifs from off her breast the pearly dew :
 No tuneful Bee* now hies on eager wing
 His admiration of her charms to sing,
 Nor longer seeks to rifle and to sip
 The honied treasures of her fragrant lip.
 And why is this?—the reason soon is told :
 Nor Butterflies nor Bees are grown more cold —
 But thou, poor Rose!—'tis thou art growing old!
 Thy beauties in their prime but yesterday;—
 To-day, alas! are fading fast away!
 Yield thee to Love, sweet youth, while youth is thine;
 Seek thee a mate e'er yet thy youth decline,
 Nor make delay to love, to woo and wed,
 Till Age has strewn its snows upon thine head.
 Of Life's best years waste not the richest bloom
 In fruitless use, for Time is Beauty's tomb;—
 Youth, Strength, and Beauty have not long to stay,
 To-day they're thine—to-morrow pass'd away!

In Caducum Parietem non inclinandum.

WHEN the fresh rose first opens to the day,
 'Tis woo'd by all that love round flowers to play:
 But when it droops and all its bloom is o'er,
 No bee then seeks it for its honey more.

*Apes à marcidis floribus abstinere solent: mortuis, ait Plinius, floribus ne quidem corporibus insidunt.

So fares it ever with the rich and great
To poverty reduc'd by adverse Fate ;
Few know them then, or their acquaintance boast ;
Not even those who fawn'd on them the most :
Smil'd when they smil'd, and made without a cause
Each look and word their subject for applause ;
In sordid worship of that wealth and state
Which grov'ling minds then pay towards the great.
Then like the Rose deserted by the Bee,
When all its wealth of sweets has pass'd away,
Each shuns the fall'n, nor merit more can see
In him whose call they truckl'd to obey.

MY lovers and my friends stand aloof from my sore ; and my kinsmen stand afar off.—Psalms xxxviii. 11.

MANY will entreat the favour of the prince, and every man is a friend to him that giveth gifts ; [But] all the brethren of the poor do hate him : how much more do his friends go far from him !—Prov. xix. 6, 7.

SOME friend is a companion at the table, and will not continue in the day of thy affliction. In thy prosperity he will be as thyself, and will be bold over thy servants : [But] if thou be brought low, he will be against thee, and will hide himself from thy face.—Ecclesiasticus vi. 10—12.

A FRIEND cannot be known in prosperity, and an enemy cannot be hidden in adversity. In the prosperity of a man enemies will be grieved, but in his adversity even a friend will depart.—Ibid. xii. 8, 9.

WEALTH maketh many friends ; but the poor is separated from his neighbour.

Prov. xix. 4.

THERE is a companion which rejoiceth in the prosperity of a friend, but in the time of trouble will be against him. There is a companion which helpeth his friend for the belly, and taketh up the buckler against the enemy.—Ecclesiasticus xxxvii. 4, 5.

WHERE the carcase is, there the eagles will be gathered together.—Matt. xxiv. 28.

RICH MEN HAVE NO FAULTS.

WHEN as my Light much like an ev'ning starre,
 Did cast his glittering beames both neare and farre;
 Then light me glorious, flame me dreadfull made,
 And none injuriously durst me upbraide;
 But when my Light into a snuffe did turne,
 And cloth'd with darkeneffe, I did cease to burne,
 Loe how without defence I naked stand,
 Thus torne and rent by this devouring band.

Glory, as envy, so it terrour lends

FARLIE'S Emblems.

ONE ILL EXAMPLE SPOILS MANY GOOD.

Pomme pourrie gâte sa compagnie.

ONE ROTTEN APPLE INFECTS ALL IN THE BASKET.

FAIR Maid! who comes so oft this way,
Your fruit of me to buy!
In guerdon of your kindness, pray!
Before my fruit you try,—
Give ear to what I have to say,
For I would service do
To such as buy of me to-day,
Good customers like you!

ONE MANGY SHEEP SPOILS A WHOLE FLOCK.

ONE ROTTEN EGG SPOILS THE WHOLE PUDDING.

ONE ILL WEED MARS A WHOLE POT OF POTTAGE.

Full many years have I fold fruit,
 And well its nature know;
 As that of ev'ry herb and root,
 That in the garden grow;—
 And this I've found, and heard it too
 From all who fruit have grown,—
 "However fine and fresh to view,
 The good, keep best alone."
 No rotten pear, however slight
 The token of decay,
 But soon as e'er it meets the sight,
 It should be thrown away:
 For be the damage e'er so small,
 In little time, I've known
 The taint will often spread to all,
 From that one pear alone.
 I've had of Jargonels a lot,
 As sound as fruit could be,
 All from one apple take the rot,
 And prove sad loss to me.
 Nor is there fruit that ever grew,
 When spoil'd in any part,
 But soon spoils all that's near it too,
 So take these truths to heart:
 A tainted grape the bunch may spoil;
 A mildew'd ear, the corn in shock;
 A scabby sheep, with rot and boil,
 Infect and kill the finest flock.
 Hence, maiden, I would have you know
 The ill that evil contact brings
 To all the finest fruits that grow,
 And fairest maids, like other things.
 Seek only all that's good to learn;
 Thine ears from evil counsel turn;—
 For all the more the fruit is fair,
 The greater is its need of care.

TELL ME THE COMPANY YOU KEEP,

AND I'LL TELL YOU WHAT YOU ARE.

GIUCCIARDINI, in his Book entitled "Hours of Recreation," says that it is a singular and sure way to acquire a knowledge of the inner nature and character of a person, if one diligently observes the kind of society he most frequently keeps :

For two of a kind, whate'er they be,
Are forthwith certain to agree,

as Cicero said formerly when speaking of Cato : because Nature always inclines to its like ; and hence, specially applicable to the foregoing subject is the Spanish proverb :

Di me con quien iras
Dizir te he lo que haras.
Tell me, with whom thou goest,
And I'll tell thee what thou doest.

To shun evil company is therefore one of the most important things to be impressed on the mind of the youth of both sexes ; and the extent of mischief which it leads to, may be well inferred from the writings of David, a man after God's heart, and of Solomon, the wisest of kings ; both of whom gave this subject the first place in their writings. David in his first Psalm, and Solomon in the first chapter of his Proverbs, coincide with the sense expressed in the Proverbs of all nations, as may herein be seen :

HE that handles pitch shall foul his fingers.

HANDELT gy't peck,
Gy krygt een fleck.

BREIS rogneuse
Fait l'autre tigneuse.

ONT rotten sheepe wille marre a whole flocke

La mancana podrida

FLAME goes to heav'n, from whence it once did come,
 Bids earth adue, and what it hath therefrom.
 The snuffe to ashes, smoake turnes into ayre ;

 When Death hath giv'n his last and fatall blow,
 Our soule to Heaven, our Earth to earth doth goe ;
 Riches and honours, which it once did love,
 The Soule now lothes ; and seekes to dwell above :
 Learne Mortals, all false pleasures to contemne,
 And treasures, which the soule must once condemne :
 Seeke rather for the graces of the minde,
 Which you your convoy to the Heaven will finde.

Unmov'd, unchang'd, thou art in all the fame
 As heretofore ;—nor Love, nor praise, nor blame,

 Such is the icy coldness of thine heart !
 That thou art thus, explains full well to me,
 What I once deem'd mere fabulous to be :
 That even 'midst the Ocean's rolling wave,
 Where all earth's waters find a common grave ;
 There flow some Rivers which no less maintain
 Their course unbroken, and unmix'd retain Their Water's sweetness 'mid the briny main !—*
 So thou, who kindest in all hearts, desire,
 Mov'st cold and still unscath'd amidst the fire !

THE rolling wheel that runneth often round,
 The hardest steel in tract of time doth tear ;
 And drizzling drops, that often do redound,
 The firmest flint doth in continuance wear :
 Yet cannot I, with many a dropping tear
 And long entreaty, soften her hard heart,
 That she will once vouchsafe my plaint to hear.
 Or look with pity on my painful smart.
 But, when I plead, she bids me play my part ;
 And, when I weep, she says ; Tears are but water :
 And, when I sigh, she says ; I know the art ;
 And, when I wail, she turns herself to laughter.
 So do I weep, and wail, and plead in vain,
 While she as steel and flint doth still remain.—EDMUND SPENSER.

* This was anciently affirmed and believed of the River Alpheus, in its course through the

I PR'VTHEE send me back my heart,
 Since I can not have thine;
 For if from yours you will not part—
 Why then shouldst thou have mine?
 Yet now I think on't, let it lie,
 To find it were in vain;
 For thou'st a thief in either eye
 Would steal it back again.—SIR J. SUCKLING.

READER! from this our Emblem learn to be
 Th'unmingling River, flowing through the sea
 Of this World's brackish waters. Thou too, keep
 Thy course unbroken 'mid the briny deep

 To those who would their taint to it impart;
 Lest soon commingling with the 'whelming tide
 Of Passion's waves which press on ev'ry side,
 Thy Soul's sweet waters lose their purity.

CHI DIMANDA NON COMMANDA.

LIKE TO LIKE. AND NAN TO NICHOLAS.

Birds of one feather will flocke together.

LIKE PLAYS BEST WITH LIKE.

LIKE LIKE WELL, LIKE BUCKET.

WHAT! are you then in earnest, friend?
Oh, no!—it cannot be:
It's quite impossible that you
Should think of courting me!
Indeed you'd better take your love
Elsewhere; for sure am I
We are by no means suited for
The Matrimonial tie.

LIKE WILL TO LIKE.

You! who by all are said to be
 A roving, ruffling blade—
 And I, as ev'ry body knows,
 A quiet, gentle maid;
 From early youth accustom'd to
 The peaceful joys of home,
 Amid the rude and bustling world
 I have no wish to roam:
 In Housewifery and its behests,
 The greatest charm I find,
 And when from these I seek relief,
 Why then with humble mind
 I read some holy book, or spin,
 And often take delight
 To imitate in 'broidery
 Some posie's colours bright:
 'Tis seldom I go out to walk,
 And in the Street but rare,
 Excepting to and fro from Church,
 Or when I go to bear
 Some comfort to the sick and poor,
 For we are taught to give
 Some share of that we have, to those
 Who labour hard to live.
 But you without restraint give loote
 To passion's wilder sway,
 Love feasting, wine and riot,
 And are giv'n much to play:
 You know no rest, and to your mind
 No moment hath such charms,
 As when the drum or trumpet shrill
 Calls all the Camp to arms.
 Methinks some Trooper's daughter were
 For you a fitter bride,
 Who in the Soldier's ruder life
 And habits takes a pride:
 Whose eye unmov'd could look upon
 The blood-stain'd battle-field,

Can swing a sword and trail a pike,
 Nor to the best one yield.
 Who when she hears the cannon roar,
 Would stand unmov'd by fear,
 And say, what others terrifies
 Is music to her ear.
 Such is the Bride would suit you best,
 The Wife whom you would find
 Most suited to your habits,
 And your rougher tone of mind.
 Who without dread would pass her hand
 Upon your Rapier's blade,
 And bid you fight until you fell,
 And 'neath the turf were laid:
 But I who am a timid thing,
 Who even fear the smoke
 Of Petronel and Arquebus,
 Much less the cannon's stroke;
 Who see in you alone what would
 Make me much misery,
 I am no ways a match for you,
 Nor are you fit for me.
 Look but around and you will see
 Where'er you turn your eye,
 The Birds which on the water swim,
 And those which soar on high—
 All choose their mates as most befits,
 And concord every where;
 Each woo his like, as it should be,
 And like with like doth pair.
 Nought can induce the Dove to take
 The Eagle for her mate,
 The Partridge to the Buzzard-hawk
 Will never link her fate;
 The Raven black wedd not the Swan,
 'Twas not by Nature meant,
 For "Like with like" alone, my friend,
 Can give the heart content.

The ripe, in Age, part ready from the spray—
The green, in Youth, are torn by force away.

Un homme, une pomme.

Nos corps, comme les fruits aux arbres attachés,

It me semble, que la dite comparaison est propre et vive, pour exprimer la façon de mourir, et d'un robuste jeune homme, qui est encore en la fleur de son âge, et d'un bon vieil homme, qui jà va penchant vers la terre.—DU VAIK.

It is said, by the Philosopher, "Omnia quæ secundum naturam sunt, sunt habenda in bonis." But all that happens to us contrary to the usual course of nature, is generally considered lamentable. Cicero, who seems to share the sentiment of Epictetus, and who borrowed from him in his book "De Senectute," expresses himself in yet more elevated and impressive terms :

Adolescentes mihi mori sic videntur, ut aquæ multitudine flammæ vis opprimitur. Senex autem, sicut suâ sponte nullâ vi adhibitâ consumtus ignis exstinguitur : et quasi poma ex arboribus, cruda si sint, si velluntur ; si matura et cocta, decidunt. Sicut vitam adolescentibus vis aufert, sic senibus maturitas.

Quod crudum, idem et pertinax.

THE fruit that's ripe, parts willing from the tree :
Unripe, 'tis not so willing to comply :
Who call'd by Death resists his destiny,
Proves most that he is unprepar'd to die.

It is sad to die before the time : idle speech ! Before what time ? Before that prescribed by Nature ! But Nature lent life to us only, without fixing the term of its withdrawal.—CICERO.

CHRYSOS. Super Matth. 10

IN the hope of a better award,
Forgetful that Life is a loan ;
We but offer to God, as reward,
The Life which is His—not our own.

Our Life is taken from us but to give
A better life wherewith in Heav'n to live :
Unquench'd our Spirit, by our body's death,
Rises refresh'd to breathe with purer breath

The glories of our blood and state
Are shadows, not substantial things :
There is no armour against fate,
Death lays his icy hand on kings :
Sceptre and crown
Must tumble down,
And in the dust be equal made
With the poor crooked scythe and spade.—SHREVE

We spend our years as a tale that is told.—Psal. xc. 9.

Thy days of our years are threescore years and ten ; and if by reason of strength they be fourscore years, yet is their strength labour and sorrow ; for it is soon cut off, and we fly away.—Ibid. 10.

DESTINY LEADS THE WILLING, BUT DRAGS THE UNWILLING.

WHEN first my light did shine, you lik'd me well.
 Now that is gone; you hate my loathsome smell;
 You with prolongers made me live, and art
 Preserv'd my light; but now Time acts his part,
 Triumphant Time, shewes now my glasse is runne,
 (What way God knowes) I finde my threed is spunne;
 Envy hath playd its part, and I doe goe
 To Coffin: as I doe, all must doe so.
 Time breaths a shrewd and life-bereaving blast,
 Yet upward flyes my light, where it shall last.
 I'me glad to part from body, which I lov'd
 So deere, that many wayes and arts I prov'd
 The mudwall to maintaine, and body save,
 But yet in spight of me 'twill go to grave.
 This is my comfort, Body, that thy tombe
 Which is thy grave, shall be thy mothers wombe
 To bring thee once againe unto the light,
 And life, which death shall never know, or night:
 Then be content, though you and I depart:
 Yet Soule and Body still have one heart.—FARLIE'S Emblems.

Quid non sentit amor?

WHO HAS NOT FELT LOVE?

BEHOLD the wond'rous sympathy between
The strings of yonder lute, and this I play!
Is it not just as though some hand unseen
Swept the same chords, and tun'd the self-same lay?*

* The cause of this phenomenon is assigned by Cardanus in his 8th book, de sensibus. De Piles in his Cours de Philosophie, 1636, accounts for it also in nearly similar terms.

So lov'd one—though untouch'd by thee, I feel,
Sense of thy touch through all my being steal;
Hear thy lov'd voice though silent thou may'ft be,
See thy lov'd form though far away from me,
And all the radiance of thy Beauty's light,
Undimm'd to me by distance, shine no less
To me effulgent in my dream of night,
As doth by day its light of loveliness.

QUID non cernit Amor! quid non vestigat Amator!—BERGOLD.

LOVE looks not with the eyes, but with the mind.

And therefore is wing'd Cupid painted blind;
Nor hath Love's mind of any judgment taste,
Wings and no eyes, figure unheedy haste;
And therefore is Love said to be a child,
Because in choice he often is beguild.—SHAKESPEARE.

THINGS base and vile, holding no quality,

AH! I remember,—and how can I
But ever more remember well,—when first
Our flame began; when scarce we knew what 'twas.
The flame we felt; when as we sat and sigh'd,
And looked upon each other and conceived
Not what we ail'd, yet something we did ail;
And yet were well, and yet we were not well:
And what was our disease we could not tell.—Old Poet.

O AMOR NAO TEM LEI.—LOVE KNOWS NO LAW.

— LOVE refines

The thoughts and heart enlarges : hath its seat
In reason, and is judicious : is the scale
By which to Heavenly love thou mayest ascend ;—
Not sunk in carnal pleasure : for which cause
Among the beasts no mate for Love was found.—MILTON.

Oh ! there are looks and tones that dart
An instant sunshine through the heart ;
As if the soul that minute caught
Some treasure it through life had sought ;
As if the very lips and eyes
Predestin'd to have all our sighs,
And never be forgot again,—
Sparkled and spoke before us then.—MOORE.

Why should I blush to own I love ?
'Tis love that rules the realms above !
Why should I blush to say to all,
That virtue holds my heart in thrall ?
Is it weakness thus to dwell
On passion that I dare not tell ?
Such weakness I would ever prove—
'Tis painful, but 'tis sweet to love.—KIRKE WHITE.

Gaudendum cum Gaudentibus.
Joying with the Joyful.

AS lute to lute in harmony attun'd,
Vibrates in glad response, as though it shar'd
The joy that thrills the other's waken'd strings ;
So let thine heart responsive share the joy
Thy neighbour feels ; nor look with sullen eye
On eyes where gladness beams. Learn thou from this
To share in the delight which others feel,
And banish rankling envy from thy breast
When fortune smiles upon thy fellow man.—
Learn thou from this no less his grief to soothe
With brotherly response ; for just as joy
Gains increase more from that which it bestows,
So grief grows less, lull'd by the soothing tones
Of Pity's kind compassion for her woes.

'Thou wilt shew me the path of life : in thy presence is fulness of joy ; at thy right hand there are pleasures for evermore.—Psalms XVI. 11

HERO who dwelt by Hellesponticke strand,
 Hang'd forth a Light, Leanders marke for land,
 Whither his helmeleffe course he steer'd and mov'd,
 Whilst he made haste to see his welbelov'd,
 Which when fierce Boreas with his blustering blast
 Put out, he in the floods away was cast:
 So that his wedding light became a torch,
 To convoy him to Proserpines blacke porch.

Almighty God who made all by his power,
 Holds forth his Light from the Celestiall Tower:
 That when the stormes our tossed soules annoy,
 It may direct us to our heav'nly joy.
 No storme against this Light can so prevaile
 But Saints unto their wisht-for Haven may faile.
 Where for their Wedding torch this Light they have,
 Which never shall convoy them to their grave.

A GRANDE MONTEE GRANDE DESCENTE.

A GRAN SUBIDA GRAN CAYDA

THE HIGHER THE RISE THE GREATER
THE FALL.

A TORTOISE of ambitious mind,
Such as in Men we sometimes find,
Puff'd up with an egregious sense
Of his superior excellence,
Much wish'd to change his lot on earth
For one more fitted to his worth;

PRIDE IS THE BEGINNING OF ALL DESTRUCTION.

Which in his self-conceit he deem'd
 Too little by his friends esteem'd—
 Who neither would allow nor see
 That he possess'd a quality
 Of form or of intelligence,
 Beyond their Tortoise common-sense.
 Resolv'd ne'erless that they should be
 Convinc'd of his ability
 To shine where they could never hope
 With his superior mind to cope,
 Seeing one day the bird of Jove
 Alighting from the clouds above,
 He urg'd him with address polite
 To bear him upward in his flight;
 That he might prove to all his race
 How qualified he was to grace
 A station more exalted than
 Their weak intelligence could scan:
 Whence he at once might grasp and see
 The glories of the land and sea,
 And like the eagle gaze upon
 The full effulgence of the sun,
 High up above the puny ken
 Of grov'ling Tortoises and men.
 The Eagle, quick as thought to see
 The silly reptile's vanity,
 Express'd himself but too content
 To do what from the first he meant:
 And seizing him right quickly too,
 He upward with the Tortoise flew,
 So high into the realms of light,
 That almost losing sense and sight,
 The Tortoise wish'd himself again
 Below upon the humble plain.
 But upward still the Eagle rose,
 As though pretending to dislose

L'ORGUEIL VA DEVANT L'ECRASEMENT.

A MAN'S PRIDE SHALL BRING HIM LOW.

A range of view as high and wide
 As most would satisfy his pride.
 Like silver threads the rivers flow,
 And wind some thousand feet below :—
 Like mole-hills are the mountains high—
 In vast expanse—Earth, sea and sky
 Lit up and flooded with a light
 Too glorious for the reptile's sight.
 Anon, the Eagle asks him how
 He liked the change from things below?
 If higher yet he'd like to rise?
 And felt at home? and how the skies
 Agreed with his abilities?
 When lo! the Tortoise, all dismay,
 Had not a single word to say!
 With scornful and derisive shriek,
 Unloosing then both claws and beak,
 The Eagle lets the Tortoise go;
 Which, dash'd upon the rocks below,
 Became his prey, and learnt—too late—
 The ills that on ambition wait.

 E'en so at Courts, when men of low degree,
 And menial minds, are raised to rank and place;
 How oft are they uplifted but to be
 Cast down with greater force and more disgrace!

REPROVE OTHERS, BUT CORRECT THYSELF.

El corcobado ne vee su corcoba, y vee la de su companon.

THE HUNCHBACK SEES NOT HIS OWN HUMP, BUT HE SEES HIS NEIGHBOUR'S.

WITH rare exception, almost ev'ry one
Is wondrous apt his Neighbour's faults to see;
And yet, however evident his own,
To them he's blind—or thinks that only he
From imperfection and from fault is free.

EVERY MAN HATH A FOOL IN HIS SLEEVE.

A Hunchback here, brimfull of self-conceit,
Derides a fellow-Hunchback passing by;
And points to him, that ev'ry one they meet
May ridicule the man's deformity.

Yet he himself; the Jeerer, what is he?—

A crooked Dwarf, mis-shap'd from head to toe,
With bos behind of such enormity,

As though a mountain on his back did grow!
And what is Man, that he would cenfor be

Of that which Nature gave his fellow-man!

In what deriving from ourselves, are we

In aught entitled other men to scan?

Shall we assume in figures of our own

To reckon up another man's account!

And carp at him for flaws and faults alone,

When our own ledger shews no small amount!

To ev'ry man, we know to indicate

Wherein he fails—and—strange sagacity!

To make the most unerring estimate

Of what he is—and what he ought to be!

But on himself, who turns his eye? not one!

And though so keen our neighbour's humps to see,
We're blind to that upon our back alone,

E'en though that hump by far the greater be!

It was not thus, my friends, that we were taught

That practice sweet of Love and Charity,

By which the Man-God our Redemption bought,

In pity for our mortal frailty!

Look not in scorn upon thy brother's shape,

If nature chose to vary it from thine;

For though it may resemble more the Ape,

It may have Light within far more divine!

Turn thine eyes inward on thine heart, and see

What flaws are there, what seething germs of ill

That need thy care, lest their malignity

Shall render thee one day more hideous still.

Who ridicules his neighbour's frailty,
Scoffs at his own in more or less degree:
Much wiser he who others' lets alone
And tries his talent to correct his own.

AND why beholdest thou the mote that is in thy brother's eye, but considerest not the beam that is in thine own eye?

Thou Hypocrite, first cast out the beam out of thine own eye; and then shalt thou see clearly to cast out the mote out of thy brother's eye.—Matt. vii. 3. 5.

 Hoping that nothing shall the same reveale,

T'entrap the flies and gnats which fill the air,
So with th' entangling nets by Venus laid
T' ensnare the hearts of heedless youth and maid:
For in the Love net, as the Spider's too,
The gnat is taken, but the Bee breaks through.

VOLONTE REND TOUT POSSIBLE.

Hence, young folks, learn thro' Venus' nets to break,
Nor let their flimsy meshes captive take
Both heart and mind: Take pattern by the Bee:—
Like him resist the loss of liberty;
Break boldly through; but if the strength you lack,
Take my advice, and cleverly turn back.

Making vast rents, through which the flies make way;
And he, poor fool, has little else to do
Than mend his net, and fast throughout the day.
He who from failure would secure disgrace,
Must never all at once too much embrace:
Who seek to compass least, and least aspire,
Achieve most oft the things which they desire.

Or hold it from the chosen path of good ?—
Since this World's snares are but as frail a stay,
And as the Spider's easily withstood,
When heart and mind with one accord unite

A HEN LAYS EVERY DAY, BUT AN OSTRICH ONLY ONCE A YEAR.

HEAR now what has befallen me; I'm nicely taken in!
All through my Wife! who thought at once a mine of wealth to win:
A Dealer shew'd this Ostrich and its egg to her one day,
And making her believe 'twas such a wondrous bird to lay;
I bought it at her bidding—brought it home, and, like her, thought
A Bird that lay such eggs as that, could not be dearly bought.

A PASSO A PASSO SE VA LONTANA.

Hens' eggs (thought I), however good, were at the best but small,
 And, as compar'd to Ostrich eggs, were of no size at all.
 Off such an egg as that, why, two could make a dinner quite,
 'Twas big enough to satisfy a ploughman's appetite.
 Such was my mind: but very soon I'd reason to regret
 I'd parted with my money, or an Ostrich ever met.
 It eat! Oh! such a bird to eat as that I never saw!
 No end of food and things could satisfy its hungry maw;
 But Eggs! not one it laid! though all the while I did my best
 With hay and straw and feathers soft to make the bird a nest.
 When, after waiting long,—'twas just about the month of May—
 I found one egg! Eh! now, thought I, it has begun to lay!
 But all my joy was very short, for from that time till now,
 It hasn't laid another egg, nor will it any how.
 Yet all this while our Hens, as is with Hens the usual way,
 They've always laid at intervals, and often ev'ry day.
 At length, all patience losing, and my temper put about,
 I went up to the Ostrich, and I call'd to him; Turn out!
 Away with you, you ravenous brute, you shall no longer stay!
 You're big enough, and eat enough, and yet no eggs you lay.
 I see how 'tis with you, you're all appearance, nothing more;
 In buying you I've learnt what I ought well to have known before:
 The biggest things are not the best, the brightest often drofs;
 And when we grasp at profit most, we oft get greater losfs.

However stern his nature hitherto,

How pliant then the sternly moulded mind
Of Sage and Soldier, as of rugged hind!

FARLIE'S Emblems.

IT IS NOT LAWFUL TO DO EVIL

Snijt men sijn Neus af men scheut sijn Aensicht.

WHO CUTS OFF HIS NOSE SPITES HIS OWN FACE.

COME here, all Friends, who know, and would Advise me for the best ;—
I've got a Nose, the sight and thought
Of which destroys my rest.
A Nose, alas ! with wens and wheals
Surcharged and cover'd o'er ;
A huge unfightly Nose, such as
No man e'er had before.

~ THAT GOOD MAY COME. ~

GOOD INTENTIONS CAN NEVER JUSTIFY EVIL ACTIONS.

CAST THY BURDEN UPON THE LORD, AND HE SHALL SUSTAIN THEE.

It looks juſt like a bald-coot's noſe,
 It's ſcarlet-red and blue,
 And juſt as if a younger lot
 Of Noſes on it grew.
 Oh, ſuch a Noſe! a ſnout ſo ſtrange!
 That when I'm in the ſtreet,
 Each looks at it ſurpris'd, and all
 The children that I meet
 Point after me and ſay, "Oh! what
 A Noſe that man has got!
 Who ever ſaw the like of that?
 'Tis like a Porter's knot!"
 And in forfooth, my Noſe is like
 An Oſtrich-egg in ſize,
 'Tis like a huge black-pudding that
 Stands out between my eyes.
 At ſight of it, myſelf, ſometimes
 I'm terrified, nor know
 What with it I'm to do, or if
 Yet larger it may grow.
 A Noſe!—but there, I've ſaid enough:
 I cannot longer bear
 So hideous a thing as this
 Upon my face to wear.
 I often think I'll cut it off!—
 And why not?—why delay
 To do what one hears ſpeak of in
 The Proverb ev'ry day?
 But hold! are Noſes after all
 No uſe upon the face?
 Although their ſhape and ſize be not
 Conſiſtent quite with grace?
 If cut it off I do—Why what
 An awful gap there'll be!
 Without a Noſe, my face will then
 Be horrible to ſee!
 Eh! friend, put by thy knife, nor liſt
 A ſuicidal hand
 Againſt thyſelf! for as thou art,
 'Tis meet to underſtand,
 Lies neither in thy will nor right

To mar, nor to upbraid;
 Bow meekly rather to His Will
 Who thine affliction laid!
 Seek not with violence to do
 What patience may effect;
 By gentle means 'tis easier oft
 To heal and to correct.
 Try these, my friend, they may avail,
 But should they not succeed,
 Spare thine own flesh, nor mar thy face
 By such ungodly deed.
 Wouldst further know, my friends, some rule
 Of conduct to deduce
 From this my theme? Read on—my aim
 Is but to be of use.
 Herefrom learn also to respect
 The failings of thy friend,—
 To him who to thy blood belongs,
 Thine helping hand extend:
 When husband or the wife have left
 Their duty's path awhile—
 A mother, brother, sister err'd,
 Strive thou to reconcile.
 Forfake thy kindred not that they
 Have fall'n their cross beneath;
 The strength has not been giv'n to all
 To gain the Victor's wreath:
 Though thou their errors mayest hate,
 Let judgment be deferr'd;
 Hate thou not them, but pity more
 That they should so have err'd.
 Drag not their faults into the light,
 But kindly draw the veil,
 As teaches Love, that other eyes
 May see not where they fail.
 Be the Physician thou, and strive
 All that thou canst to cure;
 Canst thou not heal, then learn, and teach
 How others may endure.
 The suffering limb by force is not made whole,
 Nor heals Reproof the gangrene of the soul.

MY Light is pleasant, when the night doth gloome,
 And pitchy darkenesse lines the mourning roome;
 Whither thou lifts Cleanthes smoake to blow,
 Or if the Matron like to twist her tow.
 When Phæbus setteth, I watch centenall
 Untill he from my station doth me call.

Spare me, lend not my light to Titans ray;
 So shalt th' enjoy me when there is no day.
 If thy estate be meane, husband it well,
 And it Attralick wealth shall parallell.

FARLIE'S Emblems.

HE THAT FOLLOWETH MERCY FINDETH LIFE.

BLESSED ARE THE MERCIFUL, FOR THEY SHALL OBTAIN MERCY.

DRINK LITTLE THAT YE MAY DRINK LANG.

*Noch vinnigh Slaen, noch harden Dwauck,
En brengt den Esel tot den Drank.*

DRINK WASHES OFF THE DAUB AND DISCOVERS THE MAN.

DRINKING KINDNESS IS DRUNKEN FRIENDSHIP.

THOUGH TAKEN TO THE WATER'S BRINK,
NO BLOWS CAN FORCE THE HORSE TO DRINK.

I N vain with cheering words I've tried,
And ev'ry means that I can think
Of oaths, and blows, and kicks beside
To get this plaguety beast to drink!
I've led him by the bridle thrice,
And coax'd and pull'd, and coax'd again,

WHEN THE WINE IS IN, THE WIT IS OUT.

But he wont drink at any price,
 And blows and words alike are vain.
 Yet when I turn the matter o'er,
 I really think, myself despise,
 That I in fense am wanting more,
 And of the two the Horse is right !
 Why, after all, should I feel fore
 And lose my temper in this way ?
 The beast p'rhaps drank enough before,
 And seldom drinks three times a day ;
 That's why he had no will thereto,
 Nor would approach the water's brink :
 But how could I expect him to ?
 If he'd nor thirst nor need of drink !
 And if the brute himself but had
 The pow'r of speech, assuredly,
 Brute as he is, he'd call me mad,
 And much the greater fool than he !
 Hence it is plain that even Man,
 So bent each beast with scorn to treat,
 May learn from them more wisdom than
 In his own fellow oft he'll meet !
 For lo ! no force can bring the beast
 To drink, if not his thirst to slake,
 While Man, creation's lord at least,
 Will drink all day for drinking's sake !
 The saying is well known and true,
 That when a beast has drank his need,
 E'en though a King himself might sue,
 He'll drink no more, not he, indeed !
 Fie ! Man !—fie ! you, the lord of Mind !
 Who, sway'd by senseless appetite,
 In needless drink enjoyment find,
 'Gainst nature, reason, and 'gainst right !
 Your thirst once quench'd, desist, nor let
 The taunts of fools, nor warmth of friends
 Prevail to make you once forget
 The bound where Reason's empire ends.

Are you your Senfes', Passions' slave,
 More than the humble brute a-field?
 Or in the pow'r of Mind you have,
 Must it before his Instinct yield!
 What would the people faye to see
 Good wine into the Kennel cast?
 And yet, the Drunkard, is not he
 A human Kennel to the last?
 Why good drink down the Sewers throw?
 Worfe than the brute art thou, Man-fool!
 Wouldst thou a nobler duty know,
 Betake thee to the Horfe to school.
 If't's more than Horses' work to think;
 In one thing yet the Horfe stands first,
 It's more than Horses' work to drink
 Without the need or sense of thirst.

SHAKSPEARE. Measure for Measure

WHEN Phæbus sets in the Hesperian streames,
 And Westerne shores blush with his drowned beames ;
 Then I as Phæbus second must give Light,
 And act my part in darkenessse of the night :
 But now my Light complains that I decay,
 And into greasie teares doe melt away ;
 So I am forst to yeeld. O turne thy teame

 Vnto his Heavenly mansions from below,
 Then he his holy servants did command,
 Conspicuous to the world, like lights, to stand ;
 But when they faile with watching, toile, and age,
 And now are ready to goe off the stage,
 Then up they yeeld the light of life and cry ;
 O come thou Sonne of righteoufnesse, we die.

Nimia libertas fit servitus.

ONE QUID NIMIS.

NOTHING IN EXCESS.

EXCESS OF LIBERTY LEADS TO SERVITUDE.

UNTIL this hapless moment I was free,
And went where'er my will or fancy led,
But now oh! where—where is that liberty
So long my boast? alas! for ever fled.
Ah! woe is me that ever I was lur'd
By aught so poor and tasteless as this rind,
To enter here, before I was assur'd
Some means of exit and escape to find.

EXTREMES ARE EVIL.

Till now without restraint I ran about,
 Each place alike, a house secure for me ;
 I'd holes in plenty to go in and out,
 Nor fear'd our race's direst enemy.
 Now here, now there, the barn, the granary,
 The kitchen, larder, parlour, and the store
 Were mine to roam in full security,
 And feast my fill :—what could I wish for more ?
 Fool that I was, thus to be captive made !
 I tremble at the doom that waits me now ;
 Yet whom have I to blame or to upbraid ?
 Myself alone ; and to my fate I bow,
 Convinced too late, that he is caught at last,
 Who runs about too much and lives too fast.

The Spoiler is made Spoil.

ONE summer eve, beneath the greenwood shade,
 I found young Phillis sitting fast asleep.
 With noiseless step before th' unconscious maid.
 Joying to catch her in that slumber deep.
 I stood and gazed : as though to feast my sight
 On ev'ry feature of her charming face :
 And though her eye-lids veil'd from me their light,
 Her rosy mouth, with such bewitching grace.
 Seem'd as it were to proffer me the kiss
 So oft denied me with a smart rebuke :

LONG INDULGENCE IS ITS OWN PAYMASTER.

That turning Thief at once, I stole the bliss ;
 But in that theft, lost more than what I took.
 So, gentle reader, in the Love-chase too,
 As with the mouse entrapp'd for love of bacon :
 We're often made our very luck to rue,
 Just when the thing most wished for has been taken.
 I stole from her a kiss, but Phillis, she
 At once stole heart and peace of mind from me ;
 The mouse, poor thing, lost life with liberty :
 But without Phillis, what were life to me ?
 Oh ! Love, thy pow'r surpasses all belief—
 That Phillis sleeping, thus should steal the Thief !

Who poaching goes on Love's domain,
 Oft loses where he thought to gain :
 And when least thinking such may be,
 To his surprise doth oftentimes see,
 Just like the mouse above pourtray'd,
 Himself ensnar'd, and captive made.

— Carpitque et capitur unâ,

Pœna comes Sceleris.

Punishment is the companion of Crime.

JUST as the greedy rat has seiz'd the bacon,
 Down falls the trap, and lo ! the thief is taken.
 The prey though seized, of what avail to him !
 That blow struck terror into every limb !
 'Tis not enough to say ; the evil deed
 Brings its requital as the doer's need :
 The culprit from the moment of his crime,
 Stung by his conscience through each hour of time,
 Though none pursue, in each a captor sees,
 Starts at each sound that's home upon the breeze,
 And where none other aught of terror deems,
 Quails 'fore the hangman of his nightly dreams.

WHEN as the conqu'ring fleete return'd from Troy,
 And Pallas stormy wrath did them annoy;
 Then Nauplius fought revenge upon the Greekes,
 And hang'd out Lanterns on the rocky creekes;
 The Greekes deceived did the rockes mistake,
 And dashing gainst them did nights shipwracke make.
 Whilst we unto our wisht-for Country goe,
 This lifes fierce billowes tosse us to and fro;

 But oft they drave us to a dolefull end:
 If thou be wise shunne honours lights so hy,
 And from shipwracking Siren pleasure fly.

WHO WOULD LEARN TO SHAVE WELL, SHOULD FIRST PRACTISE ON A FOOL'S BEARD.

THE Proverb is of antient date,
That he who well would learn to shave,
His fullest wish to consummate,
Should on a Fool's beard practice have.
As with each phrate of antient lore,
The sense implied hath ta'en its rite

A WISE LOOK MAY SECURE A FOOL IF HE TALK NOT.

From long experience gone before,
 That Fools to deal with maketh wise.
 For Fools, of all men moſt precife
 In things of import leaſt, e'er gave
 The wideſt ſcope for praſtice nice
 Of Patience and of Virtues grave.
 In ſhaving Fools the barber'll find
 Thoſe Virtues to the utmoſt tried,
 And howſoe'er to pleaſe inclined,
 Both ſkill and patience miſapplied.
 Of head and beard each ſep'rate hair
 Muſt have the ſame attention paid,
 Muſt be arranged with niceſt care,
 And juſt as Fool will have it laid :
 At ev'ry clip he ſays, "Take heed!"—
 And in the looking-glaſs muſt view
 If all is done as he decreed,
 And what the Barber next muſt do :
 This lock is now ſomewhat too long,
 And this too ſhort—now here, now there,
 There ſomething ails, a curl lies wrong
 In beard or whiſker, or ſomewhere.
 On this ſide now there needs anew
 Juſt—juſt a leetle ſnipp'd away,—
 "So! let me look! yes! that will do—
 But here! this turn!—looks well? nay! nay!
 No mouſtache ever look'd well ſo,
 Like that indeed it cannot ſtay!"
 And all the Barber ſtrives to do
 Is vain as all he tries to ſay :
 Yet! juſt this place behind the ear?
 Aye! Fool! that's juſt the place that ail'd thee!
 From what we've ſeen 'tis very clear
 It was the brains from firſt that fail'd thee!
 Who wants now this, now that, nor knows
 What 'tis he needs, doth clearly ſhow it :
 For lacking brains, he feels and ſhows
 He wants within the means to know it.

All those who appear Fools, are so, and no less, half of those who do not appear to be so.

FOLLY has a wide dominion in the World; and if there be some little Wisdom, it is pure Folly compared with the Wisdom of the Most High. But the greatest Fool is he, who does not believe that he is so, and who imputes Foolishness to every body else. To be Wise, it is not sufficient to appear so to one's self. He is Wisest who does not think that he is Wise; and he who does not perceive that others see, does not see himself. How full soever the World be of Fools, there is no person who thinks himself one, nor even, who suspects himself of folly. —GRAYSON.

THERE are People (in every class of Society) who entertain a high opinion of themselves, but those more particularly, who are the least worthy. Each considers himself the centre of the Universe, and destined for an exalted position. Hope undertakes rashly, and Experience renders it no assistance. Vain imagination finds an executioner in Reality, who undeceives it. Every one should know his proper sphere of action, and his fittest condition. Reality would then be the regulator of Self Opinion — Idem.

FORTUNE takes care that Fools should not be seen.
She places 'em aloft, o' th' topmost spout
Of all her wheel. Fool are the daily work
Of nature, her Vocation. If he form
A Man, she loses by't, 'tis too expensive;
'T would make ten Fools. A Man's a Prodigy.

Un Sot n'a pas assez d'étotie pour se croire un Homme. — LA FONTAINE.

MUCH like as wine the nurse of Poets veine,
 When prison-like the caske doth it conteine;
 Farre from the bottome while you draw the wine,
 You will it find more plenteous and more fine;
 But when you come to dreg, no wine abounds,
 Both leaft and worst remaineth in the grounds:
 Such like the shining of a candle we see,
 Which kindled once burnes not still equally;
 At first it giv's greater and clearer light,
 And is more pleafant both to smell and sight;
 But when it comes to snuffe and even spent,
 It shineth lesse, and gives a filthy sent.

The candle and wine's our life, which, in its prime,
 Doth flourish more, and hath more hope of time;
 But when with mustie age our life decayes,
 Then many forrowes have we, and few dayes.

WHEN the old Sow has play'd her pranks,
And upset tubs and pails around her,

INNOCENCE IS NO PROTECTION.

But she, well vers'd in all his oaths,
 And in their meaning full confiding,
 Runs off and leaves her pigs behind
 To bear the blame and get the hiding.
 And they, poor pigs, though innocent
 Of all the harm, despite their squeaking,
 Get beat all round and made to smart
 For all the big Sow has been breaking.

'Tis thus we often see in life,
 The great misdoers save their bacon,
 While blame and punishment alike
 Fall on the smaller folks when taken :
 How Kings and Statesmen for their faults
 Get scatheless off, nor fear vexation,
 While all the ills which they have wrought
 Are felt and paid for by the nation.

ITS GOOD FISHING IN TROUBLED WATERS.

The Reader will imagine a picture, representing a Fisher disturbing the water with a long pole, and driving the fish towards the net.

YOU wish to know what I'm about ?

My bus'ness is soon told :

I'm going to fish upon a plan

Advis'd from time of old.

In waters that are most disturb'd,

Most fish are caught, they say ;

But when the water's calm and clear

The fish all swim away :

For then too cautiously they scan

The meshes of the net,

Or be your bait however good,

No bite from them you get.

But quite another sport it is

If you disturb the stream :

The troubled water then gets thick,

And roach, perch, eels and bream

Are taken then alike at once,

Large fish as well as small,

All caught together in the net :—

That's what I fishing call !

Need I say more ? He who knows not

To make a stir in this World's stream,

Will but a sorry Fisher prove,

Nor minnows catch, much less a bream.

Stir, Fisher, stir ! Stillness does harm :

It little profits when the water's calm.

Alone sufficed, as I'd heard tell,
 To spread dismay and death.
 At length their snappish noise despite,
 I felt within my breast
 A strange resolve to stay my flight,
 And meet them at my best.
 So looking round as fiercely too,
 I was about to draw,
 And pierce the hissing monsters through;
 When all at once I saw—
 And said, as plain as I could speak:
 Why I'm a fool outright!
 The beast's a flat and toothless beak!
 With that he cannot bite;
 No claws upon his feet has he
 That I had need to fear,
 No crooked talons that I see

 As was the taper, so the candle was fine :
 When light is gone, this gives an odious snuffe,
 That smels of Hyblas sweete nectarian stuffe.

So when the wicked sits in honours chaire,
 Unto the good man all doe him compare ;
 But when Death sparing none, his maske puls off,
 And changing Fortune sets him for a scoffe :
 Then to the fittle people he doth stinke,
 His name smels like a common-shore or finke :
 The good againe, even in adversity,
 Cares not for Fortunes false inconstancy ;
 And when against him death hath done her best,

FARLIE'S Emblems.

TOUT PAR AMOUR, RIEN PAR FORCE.

Met onwillige honden is't quaet hafen vangen.

WITH UNWILLING HOUNDS IT'S HARD TO CATCH HARES.

NOT far from here there lives a Maid,
Who, as I've heard by many said,
Will bring a good dow'r of gold and land
To him on whom she bestows her hand.
A buxom, cheerful, bustling lass,
She leads her father's kine to grass,

NO STRIVING AGAINST THE STREAM.

YOU MAY ROW YOUR HEART OUT,

IF THE WIND AND TIDE SET AGAINST YOU.

She bakes and she brews, she spins and she sews,
And all a good housewife's duty knows.

Nimble and neat of limb is she,

Good temper'd too as a lass can be :

With pouting red lips, and a cheek that glows

With the freshest hues of the opening rose :

No burgher maid in Leyden town

Can match her eyes of lustrous brown :

And were I again in my youthful prime,

To woo and to win her I'd lose no time.

I wish our Claes, that son of mine,

Would but to my advice incline,

And court her close like a sensible lad,

While she and her dow'r are yet to be had :

For oft I've heard her father say :

Whoe'er she choose, he'll not say nay ;

But give her a well stock'd farm and land,

And a well fill'd purse besides in hand.

But my son Claes, he is so slow,

To her he will not courting go :

He only fancies the town-bred grace

Of a Courtly dame and a painted face.

But what's your Court or burgher dame,

With pride of birth and empty name,

To a village lass with a purse well lin'd,

And wholesome alike in body and mind ?

But, Oh ! this boy ! 'tis vexing quite

At bait so fair he will not bite ;

And all I can do, or think, or say,

Alike on the lad are thrown away.

How oft have I not brought him to

The lass, in hopes that he would woo :

But there he'd stand—like a tongue-tied lout !

Nor open his mouth—but gape about !

In vain to cheer him on I strive,

And wink to make him more alive :

But not e'en once will he take her hand,

Nor speak one word she can understand.

E'en though 'tis Fair-time now, yet he

Buys her no Cakes nor Christmas tree :

No girdle, nor ring, nor handsome coif

To set the young damsel's head-dress off.

He writes no Sonnets in her praise,

As is the custom now-a-days,

But cold as a stone, not a word will say,

That hints in the least at a Wedding-day.

But, setting all such gifts aside

Though gifts are proper to a Bride—

E'en from her he'll not take a thing,

Nor new neck-ruff, nor handsome ring !

Yet lovers mostly have the sense
 To look on gifts as no offence;
 And if a young man will aught receive,
 'Tis a sign—at least, so girls believe—
 That he next day may come again,
 And then p'rhaps speak his mind more plain:
 For Love doth ever more hopeful burn,
 When the receiver doth make return.
 But oh! this Claes! he will not woo
 At all as other people do!
 E'en when she herself asks him to dance,
 He says that he can't, and looks askance:
 For her he has no pleasing talk;
 He never takes her out to walk,—
 And when she kindly bids him stay,
 He takes up his hat to walk away!—
 To lose such a chance to me is odd!
 Now isn't my Claes a downright clod!

But now I find my wife was right,
 When she said to me t'other night:
 Do hold thy tongue, now, Father, do!
 'Tis plain our Claes don't care to woo.
 Thou'lt never bring the match to pass,
 He has no taking to the lass:
 He's p'rhaps some other girl in view,
 And take my word you may for true;—
 The Love that's forc'd will never do!
 Is not a lover, after all,
 Best judge on whom his choice should fall!
 Is courting not an impulse free,
 That knows no force nor law's decree!
 Do, Father, let the boy alone;—
 Compulsion never yet was known
 To rule th' affections of the heart,
 Nor guide the course of Cupid's dart.
 Let him be free to choose his mate
 According to his heart's dictate:
 "No Well so bad as that, we think,
 Whose water we're compelled to drink."
 Is not the Love-chase just the same
 As hunting any other game!
 What though the sportsman even see
 The hare, so tame as not to flee,
 Squat here and there at distance shout,
 As though the very dogs to count,
 Yet none the more the hare is won
 If that his dogs refuse to run:
 For hounds which hunt against their will,
 Were seldom known the game to kill.

I AM consumed with devouring fire,
 Whilst Vulcane gainst me doubles thus his ire :
 The hand, much like an Isthme, doth separate
 The flames, and doth it selfe præcipitate
 Into open danger, shewing so its love,
 The scorching flames compels it to remove.
 A thriftlesse husband if he spend his state,
 And so the wife loving to goe too neat ;
 Their stocke and meanes quickly goes to decay,
 And late repentance comes, when all's away.
 But if a friend their ruine would prevent,
 And stay their fall ; be sure he shall be shent :
 He losing labour scarce shall harmelesse goe,
 They both against him turne their malice so.
 Oft times who parteth quarrels and debate,
 Against himselfe doth turne the parties hate.

EH! Master, what is all this work,
This hamm'ring, fawing, clatter?
Each morning that I wake of late
I wonder what's the matter!
What is't that you are building here?
A Mill, forfooth! but surely

GREAT FOOLS MUST HAVE GREAT BELLS.

So large a Mill as this will be
 A lofs of money purely ;
 For in this sack of yours I feel
 So little corn for grinding,
 That when you've made it into meal
 'Twill scarce be worth your minding.
 A Hand-mill would be large enough
 To grind this corn, good neighbour !
 And if you'd be advised by me
 You'd cease your ufelefs labour.
 You may rely, this Mill of yours
 Will yield you little profit,
 'Twill soon stand still, or, what is worse,
 You'll be obliged to let it :
 Don't spend your money thus, my friend,
 'Tis hard enough to find it ;
 Who only hath a peck of corn
 Need build no Mill to grind it.

IN every undertaking, that which is Essential should have the first place; and the Accessory, if there is occasion for it, should be considered afterwards. Many men commence with that which is of least moment to them, and defer the consideration of those things which would be useful and profitable, to a period when it is too late to reap the advantages which would accrue from them. We thus frequently see men who have no sooner begun to prosper in life, than they become eclipsed as it were in their very success, and emerge in poverty. Method is as necessary to the art to Live, as to the acquirement of Knowledge.

FARLIE'S Emblems.

DO NOTHING HASTILY, BUT CATCHING OF FLEAS.

Two Dogges strive for a Bone, and the third taketh it away.

WHEN TWO FOOLS MEET, THE BARGAIN GOES OFF.

WHEN THE IRON'S HOT IT'S TIME TO STRIKE.

THE DOGS AND THE BONE

ALL ye who would a Moral learn,
Your eyes upon this Emblem turn:
Two dogs in combat fierce you see,
For Dogs, like Men, will disagree.
The cause of quarrel was a bone,
With dogs a very frequent one;

WHEN FORTUNE SMILES TAKE THE ADVANTAGE.

But while the two in deadly fight,
 Half blind with rage, bark, tear and bite,
 More bent each other's flesh to wound
 Than heed the bone upon the ground;
 Up comes a third, attracted by
 The brawl, and, quick the cause t'espy,
 Snaps up the bone without ado,
 And with it disappears from view.
 The combatants, whose kindled bile
 Had somewhat settled down the while,
 Exhausted almost with the fight,
 At once both miss the bone from sight!
 And quick as thought, with one consent,
 They cease the fray, and, both intent
 To find the prize for which they fought,
 With eager haste the bone is fought:
 But all in vain, no bone is there,—
 But foam and bloodstains everywhere,
 Mingled with clotted flakes of hair.
 At length away the dogs depart,
 In pain and discontent of heart,
 That they, who fought the prize to gain,
 Should doubly losers thus remain;
 While some one, who no risk had run,
 The "bone of their contention" won.
 Such things and like results are seen
 T'occur full oft young folks between;
 Among the People oft'ner still,
 And Princes, where there's want of skill.

But while I'm on this subject now,
 An instance I'll relate to you,
 Of which I've known before to-day
 Full many end the self-same way.
 Two suitors woo'd a Burgher maid,
 With dow'ry rich, and each afraid
 His rival should with her prevail,
 Bethought him all he could t'assail
 And prejudice the other's name,

That he might best secure the game.
 With feelings such on either side,
 Throughout the City, far and wide,
 Reports were current soon of each,
 Which did so mutually impeach
 Their name and fame, that swords alone
 Could for such calumnies atone.
 They met—they fought—the younger fell;
 His rival's blade prov'd all too well
 The bitter rancour of the thrust
 That stretch'd him prostrate in the dust.
 Though victor, yet compell'd to fly,
 T'escape the Duel's penalty,
 The field at once of both made clear,
 Another suitor now drew near;
 Who, though before but little seen,
 Had ne'er the less, like them too, been
 A Fisher in the self-same stream,
 Though not presuming such to seem:
 And boldly now he sets his sail,
 To profit by the fav'ring gale;
 Declares in all its honest truth
 The love that had o'ercast his youth;
 Subdues at once the damsel's pride,
 And changes Sweetheart into Bride.
 The Brawlers, when they both return'd
 To health and home, the tidings learn'd,
 That one far more discreet than they,
 Advantage taking of their fray,
 Had won the Prize the proper way.

WHAT e're my stat's my love proves constant still,
 To this my Soule, we part against our will;
 Or when fierce Boreas with his bluftring gale,
 Or some mischance my lovely light doth quale:
 Else I and Light my life, would never part,
 Before to ashes fates did me convert.

Nature commands us to maintaine our breath
 And being, fhunning life-destroying death.
 Yet man from Atropus oft takes the knife,
 And cuts his fatall thred devouring life:
 For why, he fearing death before his day,
 Before th'allarum, makes himselfe away.
 Ah wretch! unworthy to behold the skye,
 Who will not live, and knowes not how to dye.

FARLIE'S Emblems.

TWO SIR POSITIVES CAN'T MEET WITHOUT A SKIRMISH.

BETWIXT TWA STOOLS THE DOUP FA'S DOUN.

Nemo potest Thetidem simul et Galatean amare.

ENTRE DEUX SELLES LE CUL EN TERRE.

TENER IL CUL SU DUE SCANNI.

NO ONE CAN LOVE THETIS AND GALATEA
AT THE SAME TIME.

LISTEN, Mates! attend to me,
I would something to you say,
Which, may of some service be—
Rather curious in its way!
I've a fondness for the Fair,
Which, my reason all despite,
Makes me ev'ry day despair
Where to fix my heart aright.

GRASP ALL, LOSE ALL.

Ev'ry pretty girl I meet,
 Sets my heart in such a stir,
 That, without the least deceit,
 I would make strong love to her.
 Thus so wav'ring in my mind,
 Two girls now at once I woo ;
 But I've long begun to find
 'Tis much more than I can do.
 One is Galatea nam'd,
 And the other, as you know,
 Thetis—for her beauty fam'd,
 Spoken of where'er you go.
 Thetis lives down by the Sea,
 Galatea on the Moor ;
 Thetis talks of ships to me,
 And of things along the shore.
 Galatea, lively las !
 Speaks of dairies, and of cows,
 Of the meadows, and the grafs,
 And the crops her father grows ;
 Of the tuneful woods and fields,
 Where the sheep in hundreds stray,
 What their fleece in profit yields,
 And the joys of market-day :
 Speaks of shady lanes to me,
 With their hedgerows green and gay,
 And the Linden trees where we
 Often chat an hour away.
 Thetis too tells pleasing tales
 In the Fishers' homely talk ;
 How in Greenland they catch whales,—
 Charming 'tis with her to walk :
 Herring nets to make and mend
 Then she tells me how, and I
 Long a helping hand to lend,
 When she spreads them out to dry.
 Plaice and flounders how they take,—
 And how dry them on the shore ;

How one man of fish may make

Oft a catch of twenty score :

How they fish with hook and net,

All so pleasing like and true,

That by her bright eyes of jet

I'm both hook'd and netted too.

Galatea says that she

Likes no fish, nor those who live

Or by fishing, or the sea,

But the reason she won't give.

Galatea's constant theme

Is her butter and her cheese;—

“What's your fish compared to cream?

Soles or plaice (says she) to these!”

If I speak of fields and trees,

Or the least of farm-things say,

Thetis' look's enough to freeze,

And she takes her hand away :

If I wear a fisher's dress,

Galatea from me turns,

And, when in farm-clothes, no less,

Thetis all my wooing spurns.

When my fisher's cap I've on,

Flushings loose and jacket rough,

Galatea says, Begone!

But her look is quite enough!

If in shepherd's slouch I go,

Thetis, if she chance to see,

Calls me Boor! and jeers me so,

That all eyes are turn'd on me!

Thus for two long years have I

Chafed this game, and nothing caught;

Just as one “who hunts two hares,

Loses both, and catches naught.”

So, Mates, when you wooing go,

Fool is he who my way chooses;

Who at once courts sweethearts two,

Pleases neither, and both loses!

MUST LIE TO ONE OF THEM.

BEHOLD the Bridegroom comes, he takes his way,
 Nor Man, nor Angell knowes the houre or day;
 He faies, he'le come, much like a theefe in night,
 To judge the world with equity and right;
 Angels shall charge with trumpets sounding cleare,
 And Christ as Judge shall in the clouds appeare;
 The righteous and the wicked shall arise,
 Bodies and Soules, to passe upon that size;
 He who the oyle of preparation hath,
 Whom Christ shall find furnish'd with saving faith;
 Shall with the blessed Bridegroom mount on hie,
 Mongst Seraphimes triumphing gloriously;
 But he who hath no oyle, nor faith at all,
 Heavens dreadfull Judge shall that man cursed call,
 And banish him into the pit of hell,
 Where with the fiends for ever he must dwell.

WHEN travellers first the Pyramids behold,
Lifting their sun-lit tops in contrast bold
Against the splendour of th' Egyptian sky ;
Their grand dimensions to the fancy brings
The semblance of the Palaces of Kings ;
So great is their external majesty !
But what are they within ?—No Halls are there,
No Royal Courts, nor Princely Chambers fair,
The imaged scenes of Eastern pageantry.
What then ! mere dust ! the Ashes of the Dead !
Around, within, on every side outspread
In one drear, dread Sepulchral mockery !
'Tis thus we are instructed to beware
Of judging from Appearances alone ;
"The Castles that we image in the air"
Are not more empty—when the truth is known.

Plus on a de fonds, et plus on est homme.

THE Inside ought always to be worth as much again as the outward appearance. There are people who have exterior only ; resembling houses which have not been finished for want of funds : the entry is palatial, the inside a hovel. This kind of Persons presents nothing to fix the attention, or rather, all within them is fixed ; for after the first salutation the conversation is ended. They make their introductory bow, after the fashion of the Sicilian horses, which after one or two caracoles become suddenly metamorphosed into motionless taciturnity. For words are soon exhausted when the mind is barren. It is easy for them to deceive others who like themselves have nothing but appearance, but they are objects of pity to persons of discernment, who soon discover that they are empty within.—GRACIAN'S Maxims.

Tinnit ; inane est.

What's here to be enjoy'd
But grief and sickness, and large bills of sorrow,
Drawn now, and cross'd to-morrow !
Or what are men, but puffs of dying breath,
Reviv'd with living death !
Fond youth, oh, build thy hopes on surer grounds
Than what dull flesh propounds :
Trust not this hollow world, 'tis empty : hark, it sounds.

As though the common danger had subdued them all to peace:
And quick,—as if impress'd with all the folly of their strife;
Made sensible that Union alone could save the life
Of each and all,—to face the foe they haste a ring to form,
And croup to croup close press'd make front to meet th' impending storm.*
'Twas just in time! for scarcely were they marshall'd back to back,
When down upon the herd already bursts the rav'ning pack:
But all in vain the Wolves assail; for everywhere they meet
A phalanx of opposing horns, their onset fierce to greet;
And high in air uptoss'd, or disembowell'd on the plain,—
The few remaining take to flight, nor dare th' assault again.

So should confederate States and Peoples hush all inward strife,
When from without a foreign foe assails the Nation's life;

Ne point montrer le doigt malade.

Shew not where your finger ails.

For every one will strike you there. Beware also to complain of it, for in as much as Malice always attacks the weakest point, the show of resentment and suffering only serves to gratify and to divert it. The malice of mankind always endeavours to unhinge; it gives utterance to cutting words, and resorts to every expedient, until it has discovered the sore, where it can pierce to the quick. The man of sense and tact never exposes his weak point, whether personal or hereditary; because Fortune herself takes delight sometimes in wounding the place where she knows the pain will be felt most acutely. She always mortifies to the quick. Consequently it is requisite to conceal from mankind all knowledge both of that which mortifies, and of that which gives satisfaction; in order to bring the former to the speediest termination, and to make the latter endure the longer.—GRACIAN.

CRICHO, Ep. lib. VII.

IN circumstances of difficulty, there is no better company than a resolute heart, and if that should happen to fail, it should be aided by the Mind. Difficulties grow less for them who know how to help themselves. Submit not to the strokes of adversity without an effort to overcome them, lest they become less endurable. Some persons help themselves so little in their troubles, that they increase them, for want of knowing how to meet and bear them with courage. He who knows himself well, lends assistance to his weakness in reflection. The man of judgment comes out of every dilemma with credit and advantage to himself.

WHERE THE KNOT IS LOOSE, THE STRING SLIPPETH.

WHILST I give light to others, I decay ;
 I lose my selfe, whilst I to others play :
 I watch all night with an unsleepey eye,
 And oft, before the day doth dawne, I dye :
 How oft am I by blustering Boreas mockt,
 And lighting others, I my selfe am chokt ;
 If tumult, of a night affailing be,
 I am employ'd, no rest, no peace for me :
 What most of men neglect, that I observe,
 To succour others, though my selfe should starve :
 A Law but not of nature, which directes
 All of themselves to have the prime respects.

Codrus the King, his Country to defend,
 Much like a Prodigall his life did spend,
 The Pelican to feede her plumelesse brood,
 Doth lance her breast, and straine her purest blood,
 The watchfull shepherd seldome seeing sleepe,
 Directs, and keeps from wolves his straying sheepe :
 Even Christ himselfe, the Sonne of the most Hie,
 Did suffer death, lest mortall man should die.

CALLING a few days since to pay
 A visit to my mistress fair,
 Her face quite fill'd me with dismay,
 She look'd so pale and wan with care
 That she, so full of life and song,
 As was her wont, thus sad should be,
 Made me conclude, that something wrong
 Had her befall'n — or p'rhaps that she
 Had got some silly doubts of me.

VRIENT, LET'ER OP; MEN VINT'ER NOCH

Well, dearest love!—but what is this?

What ails? what has occur'd to thee?

Why then so cold?—not e'en one kiss!—

Art ill—or discontent with me?

Nay, nay, thou'rt ill I'm sure—I see,

I know it by thy drooping eye,

Thou look'st not as thou'rt wont on me,

Come let me know,—why then that sigh?—

Speak, speak, did I yet aught deny?

But long she made me no reply,

Though still she sigh'd, and I could see,

The more I said, the more her eye

Was fill'd with tears, and turn'd from me;

Until at length quite griev'd, I said,

Come cease this weeping—speak then, do—

Tell me thy grief, nor be afraid;

If silent thus, how can I know

In what to aid or comfort you?

On this upon my arm she laid

Her pretty hand, and murmur'd low—

Alas! 'tis this—(she sighing said)

My cause of grief, since you will know:

A sad misfortune I have had!

That e'er so luckless I could be!

I've lost—I'm sure I shall go mad—

That handsome ring you gave to me!

Which all admir'd who us'd to see.

And then—Oh! woe is me!—to-day,

While walking in the Park, I felt

The Bracelet on my arm give way,—

I really thought my heart would melt:

I look'd, and lo! the diamond clasp

Which held the string of pearls I wear,

Had broken somehow at the hasp!—

You know what splendid pearls they were?

Well! eight are lost, I do declare!

Oh ! how shall I this loss repair ?—

All thy best presents thus to lose ;—

I've scarce a jewel now to wear !

And fifty pounds won't replace those !

When she had ended this lament,

Her sobs and tears came fast anew,

And I, upon her grief intent,

Knew neither what to say or do,

And truth to say, 'twas vexing too.

When just as I was deep in thought,

How best her grief somewhat t' allay,

A Jeweller my notice caught,

Who seem'd by chance t' have come that way :

Greeting us both with much respect,

He op'd his caskets to our view :

And said—Sir, p'rhaps you'll not object

To let me shew some rings to you—

And to my lady, something new !

She, (so it seem'd) her grief appeas'd

At once, at sight of all his ware,

A costly diamond ring first seiz'd,

The finest, largest he had there ;

And said :—Eh ! this is just the kind

Of ring that I have wish'd for so !

Had I but now a generous friend

To buy me that !—'twould soothe my woe !—

And, as she spoke, she kiss'd me too.

I, mov'd to see her mournful face,

Ask'd him the cost ; and being told,

Began to bid for it apace ;

I found I'd just the sum in gold :

But nothing in the price would he

Abate—and she, with eyes still red,

Look'd in my face so anxiously !—

That e'er I well knew what I said,

The ring was bought, and money paid.

That I'd been cheated to my face,

Since then I found to my surprise !

The thing was plann'd to time and place,

It was her Brother in disguise !

'Twas her own diamond ring that I

Had bought and paid for o'er anew !

So when you see your Mistress cry,

Take heed, my Friends, what 'tis you do.

But laugh or cry 'tis much the same,

They're both the sex's Winning Game.

SON CORPS NE SERA JAMAIS SANS PEINE.

WHEN that my clammy substance was entire,
 I was an earthly nurse of heav'n-bred fire;
 Now envious time doth me in ashes turne
 And to a tedious snuffe my light doth burne:
 Loe I have done, take thou this light of mine;
 I yeeld, doe what thou canst, the turne is thine.
 So the Comedian having plaid his share,
 Gives place to others, who then actors are:
 A King his weighty office having done,
 Dying transfers his Scepter to his sonne:
 When that the crasie Souldiers strength doth faile,
 The younger must the enemy assaile.

Happy is he the evening of whose daies
 Doth crowne his death with ever-living bayes.

YIELDING IS SOMETIMES THE BEST WAY OF SUCCEEDING.

OAKS MAY FALL WHEN REEDS BRAVE THE STORM.

BY YIELDING THOU MAY'ST CONQUER.

THAT the slender Reed you see,
Chaf'd and driven by the blast,
Should not soon uprooted be,
Or upon the waters cast;
That so frail a thing in form
Is not quickly borne away,
Rent to tatters by the storm,
Is a wondrous thing, you say?

FLECTI NON FRANGI.

Since so oft the stately Oak,
 Tow'ring upward to the skies,
 Is uprooted by the stroke,
 E'en despite its strength and size!
 Strange as this may seem to thee,
 'Tis with wise instruction rife,
 And imports how men may be
 Victors in the storms of Life.
 Things of lowly growth and height
 Have but little weight to bear;
 And, whate'er the tempest's might,
 Feel it in diminish'd share:
 Less expos'd to every wind
 Than the lofty forest trees,
 Humbler plants a quiet find
 That is seldom known to these.
 Fragile though the Reed appear
 To resist so fierce a blast,
 Yet it hath no need to fear;
 For when once the gale is past,
 Lifting then its head anew,
 Still unharm'd, o'er fen and lake,
 Proves the antient maxim true,
 "That which bends, doth seldom break."

Yet never let the noble mind despair;
When press'd by dangers, and beset by foes,

By unforeseen expedients bring relief.—PHILIPS.

STORMS often fell the stately oak,
High mountains feel the thunder's stroke;
And lofty tow'rs, when winds assail,
In their resistance less prevail
Than doth the reed upon the shore,
Which rises when the storm is o'er.

Confido, conquiesco.

OH! Source of every good, and every joy,
Meek resignation felt without alloy;
Jehovah! from whose ever bounteous store,
Mercy, and joy, untainted blessings pour;
Who bidst us ask, and asking not amiss,
Convey'st an heavenly, in an earthly bliss:
Whose hand protects us, and whose eye pervades,
Whose promise cheers us, and whose grace persuades,
Though thron'd on high, where blessed spirits bow,
And blissful saints sublimest raptures know:
Yet stooping low as earth, our prayers are heard,
Our wants reliev'd, and all our sorrows cheer'd:
Alike thy fondness to thy creatures shew'd
In what's withholden as in what's bestow'd.
Then let me pause—and if presumptuous thought
My humble state bewails, or grieves at aught:
O soothe with calm content, that I may share
Thy gifts with grateful heart, whate'er they are. — De:

THE END MAKES ALL EQUAL.

IF thus my light nights fable silence glads,
 Making a cheerefull roome in midnight shads;
 If Gold'n-like Phœbus and his silver sister,
 He in the day, shee in the night doth glister;
 What thought-surpassing light then shall that be,
 When we in Heaven Empyrean God shall see?
 Sooner thou canst the world hold in thy hand,
 Or in a shell containe the glassie strand;
 Than tell how glorious is the light of Heaven,
 That dark'ns the Sunne, Moone, Stars, and Planets seven:
 This onely tell: it is not Phœbus light,
 Nor Phœbes, nor the spangles of the night.
 That light which tongue cannot, nor mind descry,
 Once shalt thou see, a supream Deity.

WHO UNDERTAKES TOO MUCH SELDOM SUCCEEDS.

GREAT CRY AND LITTLE WOOL.

HEREIN we see a somewhat novel Sight,
 To which the Reader's notice we invite:
 One man doth shear a Sheep, and strange to see,
 Another shears a Pig in company.
 Let us consider what this thing may mean;
 Perchance therefrom some lesson we may glean.
 He, who the Pig doth shear, the fensels' lout,
 Believes he knows full well what he's about;

VEEL GESCHREEUWS, EN LUTTEL WOL.

And that when done, to him there will accrue
 By far the greater profit of the two.
 The Pig's the heaviest beast he thinks, no doubt,
 Has thickest fat, and much the longest snout;
 But the unruly brute, like all his kind,
 Is hard to manage, nor at all inclin'd
 To yield submissive to his treatment new,
 And gives his Shearer roughish work to do.
 Rending the air with shrillest, piercing shrieks,
 He kicks and struggles, twists about and squeaks
 With such untiring strength and energy,
 That all the neighbours round look out to see;
 Or gather near to ascertain aright
 The real meaning of so strange a sight.
 Amid much trouble, and the jeers of all,
 He shortly finds his profit very small,
 For in the place of Wool, what is't he gains?
 Mere hair and scrubby bristles for his pains.
 Now turn we to our friend who shears the Sheep:
 Unlike the Pig, he lies as though asleep;
 He wrestles not, he neither kicks nor shrieks,
 In gentle tones the Shearer to him speaks,
 And moves at will the shears o'er every part,
 Nor fears a motion that his will may thwart.
 To all men's eyes who watch the process here,
 The labour's easy and the gain is clear:
 Not scrubby bristles, but of finest wool
 His lap not only, but his basket full,
 Attest which Shearer hath the better gains,
 Both as to profit and to gift of brains.
 'Tis thus in life we not unfrequent see,
 How some Men labour long and wearily,
 To achieve a purpose which they have in view,
 Yet lose their labour and the object too;
 The while that others easily attain
 A kindred purpose, with completest gain.
 In all men do, so much on tact depends,
 That where that fails, success but rare attends.

That which is well considered best succeeds ;
 That which is well conducted surest speeds :
 Hence who in Shearing would no profit lack,
 Should choofe a beaft with wool upon its back ;
 Confider well all he would take in hand,
 Nor mix with matters he don't understand :
 What one Man does, another fails to do ;
 What's fit for me, may not be fit for you.

MY Light up to Heav'ns Mansions still doth move,
 Seeking his native place of rest above;
 But being ty'd in bondage to this frame,
 It stoopes to seeke his food, and feed his flame:
 So still it sinkes downward, untill it turne
 Into a snuffe, and ashes cease to burne.

My mind, I know not how, longeth to flye,
 Unto the Heavenly Courts and Saphire sky,
 But still its plung'd, so to the body bound.
 That its compel'd to grovell on the ground:
 Thus cralling for its food my soule can fret,
 And tasting Lote, his Country doth forget.

DRIVE THE NAIL THAT WILL GO.

THE EMPTY CASK MAKES THE MOST SOUND.

Krekel wil altiitd voor dāwen.

CRIPPLE WILL ALWAYS LEAD THE DANCE.

CROSSING o'er a Village green,
Once I saw a pleasant scene;
Country lads and lasses gay,
Dancing on the first of May,
Singing, shouting, full of glee;
'Twas a pleasant sight to see
How they danc'd the May-pole round,
To the Bagpipe's merry sound.

THE WORST WHEEL CREAKS MOST.

When the Piper shrillest play'd,
 Greater was the noise they made;
 And not one but seem'd to be Almost mad with jollity.
 But among them all was one
 Who in noise the rest outdone,
 He, the leader of the game,
 Was both bandy-legg'd and lame,
 With a club-foot of such size,
 As quite fill'd me with surprisè,
 That so clumsy shap'd a thing
 Should be leader of the ring.
 So it was ne'erless, and he
 First in everything would be:
 Whatfoe'er was piped or sung,
 Cripple's voice the loudest rung.
 Nimble though young Hans might be,
 Great though Claes' agility,
 And though Jordan knew the way
 Smartest things to Tryn to say,
 Whether jump, joke, sing or brawl,
 Cripple will eclipse them all.

But, as on that Village green,
 Just the same is elsewhere seen:
 For in Town-life much the same,
 Cripple oft will lead the game:
 Though to limp is all he can,
 Cripple is a clever man,
 And whatever may befall,
 Cripple must be first of all.

Is it not a curious thing,
 When thereto our thoughts we bring,
 That a shallow-pated fool
 Just escap'd from boarding school,
 Wanting mereest common sense,
 Full of prate and vain pretence,

Is the first to have his say,
And, unask'd, will lead the way
With opinions and conceits,
Where the world-wise hesitates?

Would you know whence this derives?
'Tis that wisdom flower drives:
Wise men ever cautious weigh
That which they may have to say;
Give opinions ne'er by guess,
Nor unask'd their thoughts express;
But a Fool, all haste that he
Something may be thought to be,
Do or say, be what it may,
Will in all things lead the way.
Hence the saying doth derive,
"Fools are they who fastest drive,"
And its well known proverb twin,
"Cripple will the dance begin."

Me then, and I may go

QUIS ENIM BENE CELET AMOREM?

Where'er I lift, without the fear
 That any one will know.
 But still, in spite of all I do,
 I fear the light is seen;
 Its rays still stream thro' all the holes
 And Lanthorn's chinks between;
 Whatever care I take, howe'er
 I strive to shade it o'er,
 Some gleams pierce thro' behind, or at
 The side, or thro' the door.
 My neighbour's very old, and as Old people often are,
 He's very much afflicted with
 A cough, and bad catarrh;
 But ne'ertheless, strange though it seem,
 As ev'ry one must own,
 The good man has a great dislike
 To lie at night alone.
 He's courting a young maiden now,
 And while he's so engaged,
 He strives his best to stop the cough,—
 But 'twill not be assuag'd:
 And while he sits and looks his best,
 To make his courtship sure,
 The sprightly lass, tho' striving all
 She can to look demure,
 Says, that is not the Music a
 Young Maiden's heart to gain,
 And bids him rest content to sleep
 Alone, and not complain:
 But if a Wife he's bent to have,
 The best thing he can do,
 Is one of his own age to choos'e,
 Who has a bad cough too.
 A fellow who to gain his bread,
 Runs errands here and there,
 Found recently, a purse well fill'd
 With ducats, in the Square:

With joy elate he took it home,
 And to his Wife he said:
 Look here! dear Trijn! I've found a prize!
 Our fortune now is made!
 But you! you must not breathe a word;
 So mind you what you do!
 No one, Trijn, save yourself, must aught
 Of this good Wind-fall know!
 No longer now with messages
 Will I run here and there;
 But like a Burgher live at ease,
 And have the best of cheer!
 Therefore stich thou this purse inside
 Thy sleeve, or else somewhere.
 Trijn swore she would, and with an oath
 To take the best of care.
 But, mark! e'en from that very time,
 The Wife began to spend;
 Drefs fine, prate large, and treat or this
 Or that dear-gossip-friend;
 The Man, too, he will go no more
 With messages—not he;
 Such paltry jobs he says are quite
 Beneath his dignity.
 The Daughter, she is drefs'd as fine—
 The babe put out to nurse,
 'Tis wondrous strange! but money ne'er
 Will stop within the purse!
 At length the truth gets wind, and lo!
 The man is prisoner made,
 And mourns within a cell, that he
 Had left an honest trade.
 The sprightly Trijn in sorrow blames
 Her foolish spendthrift-riot;
 And all because the money would
 Not rest in peace and quiet

CELAR NON TE BESOGNA.

EVERY ONE SPEAKS AS HE IS.

Elck Vogeltje singt soo't gebeckt is.

EVERY ONE SINGS AS HE HAS THE GIFT,

AND MARRIES AS HE HAS THE LUCK.

EVERY BIRD SINGS ACCORDING TO HIS BEAK.

TIS an old Saying and a true,
That ev'ry bird sings its own note;
Nor can it any other do
But as permits its beak and throat
Whene'er you rove thro' field or wood,
And well attend with ears and eyes,

EVERY MAN TO HIS TRADE.

You'll find the Proverb juſt and good,
 Whate'er the bird in ſhape or ſize.
 Thoſe which a hook'd ſharp beak have got,
 Are for the moſt part Birds of Prey,
 And bent alone on War, they wot
 No note of ſong or miſtreſſy.
 Whene'er near rivers, lake or flood
 You chance a flat-beak'd bird to meet,
 From groping in the ſluſh and mud,
 Be ſure his voice is never ſweet.
 The birds with longer flute-like beak,
 Might more be thought to ſong inclin'd,
 But in their thrumming note and ſhrick,
 No turn for melody you'll find.
 I therefore ſay,—as far as ſize
 And ſhape of beak,—nor fear proteſt,
 That of all birds beneath the ſkies,
 The little beaks they ſing the beſt.
 E'en thus among mankind, we ſee,
 God gives the little now and then,
 A talent rare and quality
 Which He gives not to bigger men.
 Of little beaks, what bird like he
 Which night-thro' ſings in wood and dale?
 That feather'd Soul of Harmony,
 That little beak, the Nightingale!
 And would you ſeek a tuneful throat,
 You'll find throughout the feather'd throng,
 The greater beak the harſher note,
 The ſmaller beak the ſweeter ſong.
 As with the Fowls of earth and air,
 Not ſo with Man—he hath no beak,
 But in his mouth beyond compare
 The nobler Godlike power to ſpeak!
 And when he ſpeaks in ſpirit kind,
 What note of bird more ſoftly ſweet
 To breathe the muſic of the mind,
 When kindred hearts and ſpirits meet!

But when the mouth of Man outpours
 The blast of Passion's wrathful breath,
 The Lion not more fiercely roars
 His angry note of blood and death!
 Hence what befalls mankind between,
 Comes from a deeper source express'd,
 Where sits, by ev'ry eye unseen
 But God's, the impulse of the breast.
 The Mouth commands, implores, decries,
 As moves the Heart, and gives thereto
 The tone which most its will implies,
 By force or softness to subdue.
 Hence ye who speak in bitter tone,
 And fiercely wound another's heart,
 Beware, and learn to curb thine own,
 Left it repay thee smart for smart.

As "by his ears the Ass is known,"
 A truth which no one can impeach,
 "The Man," as Proverbs long have shewn,
 "Is known as truly by his speech."

 With empty game-bags and dejected look,
 He found but little reason to report
 His strange device—for not a hare he took !
 He who in Council sits, or would attain
 Knowledge of aught, or see his plans succeed,
 Of all things first his tongue should well refrain,

CAROL. PASCHAL. Virt. et Vit. cap. 32.

QUI VEUT PRENDRE OISEAU, NE FAUT L'EFFAROUCHER.

Silence is the Sanctuary of Prudence.

A RESOLVE loudly expressed was never yet much esteemed. He who declares his intentions, exposes himself to censure, and if he does not succeed he is doubly unfortunate.

A man is always in time to speak, but not to refrain from speaking. We should speak as we make a Will; the fewer the words the less ground for law-suits. We should accustom ourselves thereto in matters of little moment, so that we may not fail to do so in affairs of importance. Whosoever is prompt to speak, is always upon the point of being conquered and convinced.

A heart without a secret is an open letter. Where there is depth, the secrets lie deep; for there must be great space, and a great vacuum, which will hold all that is thrown into it. Reserve derives from the great controul a man has over himself, and that is a real triumph. We pay tribute to all to whom we disclose our affairs. The security of Prudence consists in interior moderation. The things we would do should be kept to ourselves, and those which may be told may not be good to do.*

WE should hear and see, but thereby be silent.—GRAMMATE'S Maxims.

SIL y a beaucoup d'art à parler, il n'y en a pas moins à se taire.

LA ROCHEFOUCAULT.

* It was said of POPE ALEXANDER VI. and of his SON THE DUKE OF VALENTINOIS that the father never did what he said, and the son never said what he did.

THE carefull Matrone in her cell below,
 Let fall a groat, yet where she did not know :
 Forthwith she tinnes a Light, then with her broome
 She neatly sweepes the corners of the roome:
 Thus from the dust and darkeness when she finds it,
 More than the Phrygian Midas wealth she mindes it.

Our soule a divine sparke since that it fell
 Into Cimmerian darkeness of this cell,
 The soules true knowledge doth appeare no more
 Which goeth beyond Pygmalions richest store.
 Then must we light Cleanthes Lamp and find
 By study, the lost treasure of our mind.

FARLIE'S Emblems.

LITTLE CHIPS KINDLE A LARGE FIRE.

Culex fedit oculum Leonis.

LITTLE ENEMIES AND LITTLE WOUNDS

ARE NOT TO BE DESPISED.

THE GNAT STINGS THE EYES OF THE LION.

FRRIENDS! come here and list to me;
Something strange I would relate;
Should it prove of use to thee,
That will me well compensate.
Though so strong the Lion be,
Though so full of Majesty,

LITTLE BROOKS MAKE GREAT RIVERS.

Though his eyes so fiercely gleam,
 And so terrible he seem ;
 That no man, whoe'er he be,
 Can unmov'd his anger see ;
 Yet the gnat, though he's so small,
 And so flight of limb withal,
 Is so wond'rous brave and keen,
 That the Lion oft is seen
 Fill'd with dread as soon as he
 Gnats perceives but two or three !
 Yet the gnat doth not attack
 Slyly, or behind his back ;
 But, first, like a gen'rous foe,
 Scorning all advantage low,
 When the Lion comes in fight,
 Sounds his challenge to the fight ;
 And forthwith bids him prepare
 All his fiercest wrath to bear.
 Nor doth he assault his foe
 Where he least defence can show ;
 Though so small, yet keenly bold,
 Like a Paladin of old,
 He the Lion scorns t'affail,
 On the flank or on the tail.
 Front to front in open fight,
 Heedless of the Lion's might,
 Headlong at his face he flies,
 And attacks his rage-lit eyes.
 Where the Lion best can see
 All his foe's hostility,
 There the gnat, his rage despite,
 Rushing 'mid their flashing light,
 Deeply stings the fount of sight ;
 Till half blind and mad with pain,
 The Lion flees across the plain.

Let Arrogance by this be taught,
 That whatfoe'er its Strength and Size,

There's nothing with more danger fraught
 Than what is little, to despise;
 There's neither man nor brute so great
 But, like the Lion pictur'd here,
 May learn to rue the wrath and hate
 Of that which seem'd too small to fear.

TRY YOUR FRIEND ERE YOU TRUST HIM.

Amis sont comme le Melon ; De dix souvent pas un de bon.

LIKE MELONS, FRIENDS ARE TO BE FOUND IN PLENTY,
OF WHICH NOT EVEN ONE IS GOOD IN TWENTY.

I^N choosing Friends, it's requisite to use
The self-same care as when we Melons choose:
No one in haste a Melon ever buys,
Nor makes his choice till three or four he tries;
And oft indeed when purchasing this fruit,
Before the buyer can find one to suit,

TRY THE ICE BEFORE YOU VENTURE ON IT.

TRUST NOT A NEW FRIEND,

He's e'en obliged t' examine half a score,
And p'rhaps not find one when his search is o'er.
Be cautious how you choofe a friend;
For Friendships that are lightly made,
Have feldom any other end
Than grief to see one's trust betray'd!

BEPROEF uw vrient.

NOR AN OLD ENEMY.

False Judgment of the Many.

——FORTUNE now

To my heart's hope!—gold, silver and base lead.
 "Who chooseth me, must give and hazard all he hath."
 You shall look fairer, ere I give or hazard.
 What says the golden chest? ha! let me see:—
 "Who chooseth me, shall gain what many men desire."
 What many men desire!—That many may be meant
 Of the fool multitude, that choose by Show,
 Not learning more than the fond eye doth teach:
 Which pries not to the interior, but, like the martlet,
 Builds in the weather on the outward wall,
 Even in the force and road of casualty.
 I will not choose what many men desire,
 Because I will not jump with common spirits,
 And rank me with the barbarous multitudes.

OUR friends sometimes exhibit vices which have long been concealed. The best thing then to be done is to abate your intercourse gradually. You should unstitch, but not tear.—CICERO.

IN secret silence of the night what's done

GENTLE Reader, would you see
Would you fomewhat with to know
Life, depièted truthfully,
And how things in this World go?
Simple though this Emblem be,
In these busy Fowls you'll find,

EVERY MAN FOR HIMSELF, QUO THE MARTIN.

Symbolised most faithfully,
 Type most apt of Human Kind.
 Well observe how ev'ry one,
 Picking, scratching here and there,
 Looks to self, and self alone,
 Reckless how his neighbours fare.
 Not a bird among them all
 Shews another bird a grain,
 Tells him where he saw one fall,
 Nor assists, that he may gain:
 Each, on his sole profit bent,
 Plies with beak and claws apace;
 Woe to those who, negligent,
 Lose their chance, or miss the place!
 Poultry of the self-same mould,
 Grasping, snatching all they can,
 Have been found 'mong Young and Old,
 Ever since the World began.
 Hence, young friends, if you would get
 Something in Life's Scramble too,
 Keep a sharp look-out, nor let
 Others snatch the grain from you.

A KING of England being at table in the house of one of his Courtiers, and finding the dwelling spacious and full of costly furniture and plate, although the owner had been in but very narrow circumstances previous to his appointment to the office he then held, the King became very desirous to learn from him how he amassed so much valuable property in so short a period : assuring him at the same time that no mischief should come to him if he told the truth. Whereupon the Courtier, thus pressed, said incontinently, that he had always been a man of exceeding diligence and industry : that he had constantly made it a rule to rise early in the morning, and always looked after his own concerns first : having completed which, he then attended to the King's business. Upon this the King made answer that he should have just done the very reverse ; that he should have first minded the King's business, and then his own. The Courtier forthwith assured the King that he had thereby never done the least prejudice to his Majesty's affairs : for that he had only appropriated the time passed by others in sleep to the care of his own personal concerns ; having effected which, he still got to the duties of his Office before those who, having indulged in long sleep, had got to theirs, and had neglected their own affairs.

WHO would learn the art of wooing,
And ensure the most success:
Or acquire the art of doing
Winning things with most address;
Need not learned volumes open,
Writers old, in foreign speech,
But may see it plainly spoken
In the lesson I now teach.

WELL BEGUN IS HALF DONE.

WELL DONE OUTLIVES DEATH.

In your manner unpretentious,
Yet, be diligent to show,
Without being too sententious,
All the pleasing things you know.

While you strive to please and serve all
To attain the end in view,
Well examine, and observe all
Without seeming so to do.
If in them you faults discover,
Shew not you those faults perceive;
But if difficult to smother,
That they're slight, let them believe.
By this rule abide in all things,
And you'll be esteemed the more,
Nothing in life more success brings
Than to hide your neighbour's fore.

Or in wooing, or when married,
Bear this maxim still in mind:
Seldom Wedded Life miscarried
Where both sides were somewhat blind.
Shew your brighter side to all men,
And shew them that you see theirs,
Friends more readily you'll find then
To advance your own affairs.
Who most taste and judgment uses
To display his wares to view,
Best the Buyers eye seduces,
And most quickly sells them too.

AT lengthe my Store of Light hath reach'd its ende,
 Nor have I wherewithal more light to lende;
 Greafe spent, wick burned and smoake all passed away,
 Of Light berefte, what bootes it here to stay?
 Yet while I am permitted to remaine,
 It is to shewe that I may serve againe:
 In patient Hope I therefore byde my time,
 Until in me freshe Light the Fates do trimme;
 And if the greafe and wick be equale goode
 To holde such Light I rest of willinge moode.

E!! friend, why then so sad, I pray? —
Thy woeful mien and looks betray
Some deep distress, some poignant grief,
To which I fain would bring relief.
Methinks some cross-grain'd, haughty maid
Hath thine affection ill repaid, —

FAINT HEART NEVER WON FAIR LADY.

HE WHO BEGINS AND DOES NOT FINISH,

Treated thy fuit with cold difdain,
 And bade thee from all hope refrain?—
 Yes, yes! Young man, I see—I know
 'Tis that which thus dejects thee so;
 But never be like this cast down!
 Full many other men have known
 A like repulse, when first they strove
 To win a wav'ring woman's love.
 Come, come! arouse thee from this mood;
 It ill befits thee thus to brood,
 And fret, and fume so woebegone
 For loss of what may yet be won!
 Cast but thine eye upon this tree,
 And therefrom thou shalt quickly be Instructed in the art to gain
 The fair one who hath caused thy pain.
 This tree, which now so lowly lies,
 But lately lifted to the skies
 Its lofty crown; and though in size,
 And girth, and grain so fair and sound,
 Its pride is prostrate on the ground!
 Thou seem'st to wonder how 'twas done;
 How that alone the arm of one
 So great a conquest could achieve?
 List then to me, nor longer grieve;
 For as that oak was fell'd, so thou
 Thine haughty fair one's heart may'st bow.
 Arm'd with an axe of trenchant steel,
 I saw yon sturdy Woodman deal,
 In long repeat, stroke after stroke
 Against this massive heart of oak;
 Till with the oft repeated blow
 He brought the forest monarch low.

Learn thou from this, young man, no less,
 How truthful from all time was held
 The pithy Maxim for Success:
 "At the first stroke no tree is fell'd."
